We hear you

Any gripes, kudos, or ideas? Call 378-9136 to sound off.

I have one question about that big hassle over the girl wrestling at Campbell high. Why did they let her compete one night (when she won by default) and then say no the next time if the rule was there all the time. You'd think those officials would know their own rules.

Curious

Editor's note: According to Principal Bud Baldwin, the rule book covering local regulations was at the district office being revised when the question came up. The story is on page 3 of today's paper.

I don't think girls should be on the wrestling team, or the football team either. It's not fair to the boys. The girls would win because no one wanted to be hard on them.

Young Sports Fan

If that was my child who was excluded from participation because of sex, I'd take it to the Supreme Court for a decision. That certainly can't be constitutional. It shouldn't make any difference what the issue (or the sport) is if a person, girl or boy, man or woman, is qualified. I guess you'll have to sign me a . . .

Girl Libber

Editor's note: Comments were running about 3 to 1 against girls being allowed to take part in contact sports. Unfair advantage was the most commonly cited reason, with possible injury second.

I can't believe the City of Campbell would be stupid enough to ever get mixed up in the deal with Campbell (Community) Hospital. If the people who run it are in such bad financial condition they can't even pay their employees' salaries, what makes the city think they can suddenly make a go of it now?

Disgusted

I am particularily concerned about the November 24 "We Hear You" column. I'm the chairperson of the Santa Clara Valley chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU). Some questions about (contacting the A.C.L.U.) were in that column that I'd like to clear up. First we have a phone number, 293-2584, and anybody who has what they feel is a civil liberties question who calls and leaves their phone number will be called. People from the A.C.L.U. call in to the answering service every evening to get messages and they return the calls made that day. And if people will leave both their work and home phone numbers it will be easier to get in touch with them. Our mailing address is Box 215, Los Gatos, 95030. We are run by a 19-member Board of Di-

Council rejects offer

Hospital plan scuttled

By PAT SAFFORD

CAMPBELL COMMUNITY Hospital won't be issuing tax free bonds with the city's blessings, councilmen decided Monday night.

Meanwhile, Administrator Rodney Aymond of O'Connor Hospital, negotiating to purchase the closed facility and license, met with local officials last week to outline plans and seek the city's support.

In rapid fire order Monday the City Council unanimously rejected a proposal submitted by the hospital Board of Directors last week. They also made it clear they aren't interested in hearing a second proposal involving the city, reportedly now in the works.

Officials then directed a letter be sent to the Board asking that the emergency entrance sign be covered up or removed so people seeking emergency treatment aren't mislead. Several complaints have come into the city already and a similar letter from Fire Chief Gene Borden last week has gone unanswered.

ON JAN. 16 Dr. Robert M. Barr presented a multi-million dollar proposal to the Council that would include construction of a $3 million medical-dental office and issuing tax free bonds to finance improvements and equipment for the 1650 Winchester blvd. facility which has been closed for the past four weeks. The hospital closed Dec. 24, Barr reported, because of financial problems.

Barr brought with him several representatives of firms interested in underwriting the venture, including one from Houston and one from Orange, California.

The city's cooperation was necessary to allow directors to form a new, non-profit corporation and issue tax free bonds to raise funds. In return, Campbell was offered title to the hospital building free and clear in 25 years.

Monday night the City Council made it clear they weren't buying.

EARLIER THAT evening a handwritten note from Barr was read which requested the matter be continued since representatives of the bonding and hospital management firms couldn't be present that night.

"I think we should save the hospital the expense of flying people up here from God knows where," Councilman Rusty Hammer explained as he called for an immediate decision on the proposal.

Councilman Norm Paul made the motion to

Rains cause flooding

We could set a record

ALL CAMPBELL HAS to come up with is another four tenths of an inch of rain in the next five months to exceed the average yearly rainfall for this area.

A total of 14.66 inches of rain had fallen as of Tuesday morning, compared to a seasonal average of 15.02 inches.

Last year at this time a scant 5.09 inches had fallen and normal rainfall to date is 8.03 inches.

One of the wettest Januarys on record for Campbell brought with it problems of flooding, outlined by Public Works Director Joe Elliott to city councilmen Monday night.

Elliott said there was a considerable amount of localized flooding during the storms and some damage to trees and signs.

"One of the benefits, however, of this type of weather is to graphically point out where our most serious flooding areas are located and how badly flooded it can become during this type of weather," Elliott stated in the written report.

HE NOTED THREE areas which had suffered "relatively severe flooding" during the rains. These include the east side of Winchester, south of Camden ave., Chapman drive, between Walnut and Winchester and Hacienda ave., between San Tomas Aquino road and Maggio court.

The latter two areas, Elliott noted, would be costly to remedy and would require the involvement of the county to provide storm drains.

"The flooding problem at Winchester and Camden is totally within our jurisdiction," Elliott said, "and hopefully can be improved with a less costly project."

Residents got a temporary respite from rain drops last weekend but long term forecasts predict there'll be more rainfall before the month is over.

Brenda takes a 'fall' in wrestling debut

Cheering on a teammate as the Campbell High School wrestling team took on Leigh High School last Tuesday was Brenda Nunes, a junior. She wasn't cheering later that evening though as the Leigh coach decided he wouldn't let his 105-pound wrestler meet her on the mat. Over 600 people crowded into the gym to watch the match that didn't happen Tuesday and another 250 showed up for Thursday's game even though it had been announced Brenda would not be allowed to wrestle. "It may have exposed the public to a very exciting sport," Principal Bud Baldwin commented later. For the story, and more pictures, see page 3 and 15 of today's PRESS.

Watson named curator

It's not official. Jeanette Watson is the curator of the Campbell Historical Museum, a title she's held unofficially for several years.

By a 3-2 vote Monday night city councilmen voted to give Watson that title. The two casting "no" votes on the motion, Councilmen Norm Paul and Rusty Hammer, say they have no objection to Watson's official recognition but wanted the details of that non-paid, voluntary position nailed down first.

A second motion to have the City Attorney draft an ordinance outlining duties of the curator and to set a public hearing passed unanimously.

Watson, a member of the Civic Improvement Commission, spearheaded the drive to found the museum located downstairs at the Campbell library.

This Friday she is also being installed as the new president of the Campbell Chamber of Commerce.

Chamber banquet

Starting a new year off in grand style

A gala evening is planned for the annual Campbell Chamber of Commerce banquet this Friday, Jan. 27 with costumes, awards, prizes and dancing to the music of "Lujan Sound."

The theme for the 1978 installation and recognition banquet is "I Wish I Were . . ." and dinner guests are encouraged to arrive in the costume or attire of their secret wish.

No host cocktails begin at 6:30 p.m. in Sunsweet Hall at The Factory, followed by dinner at 7:30 p.m.

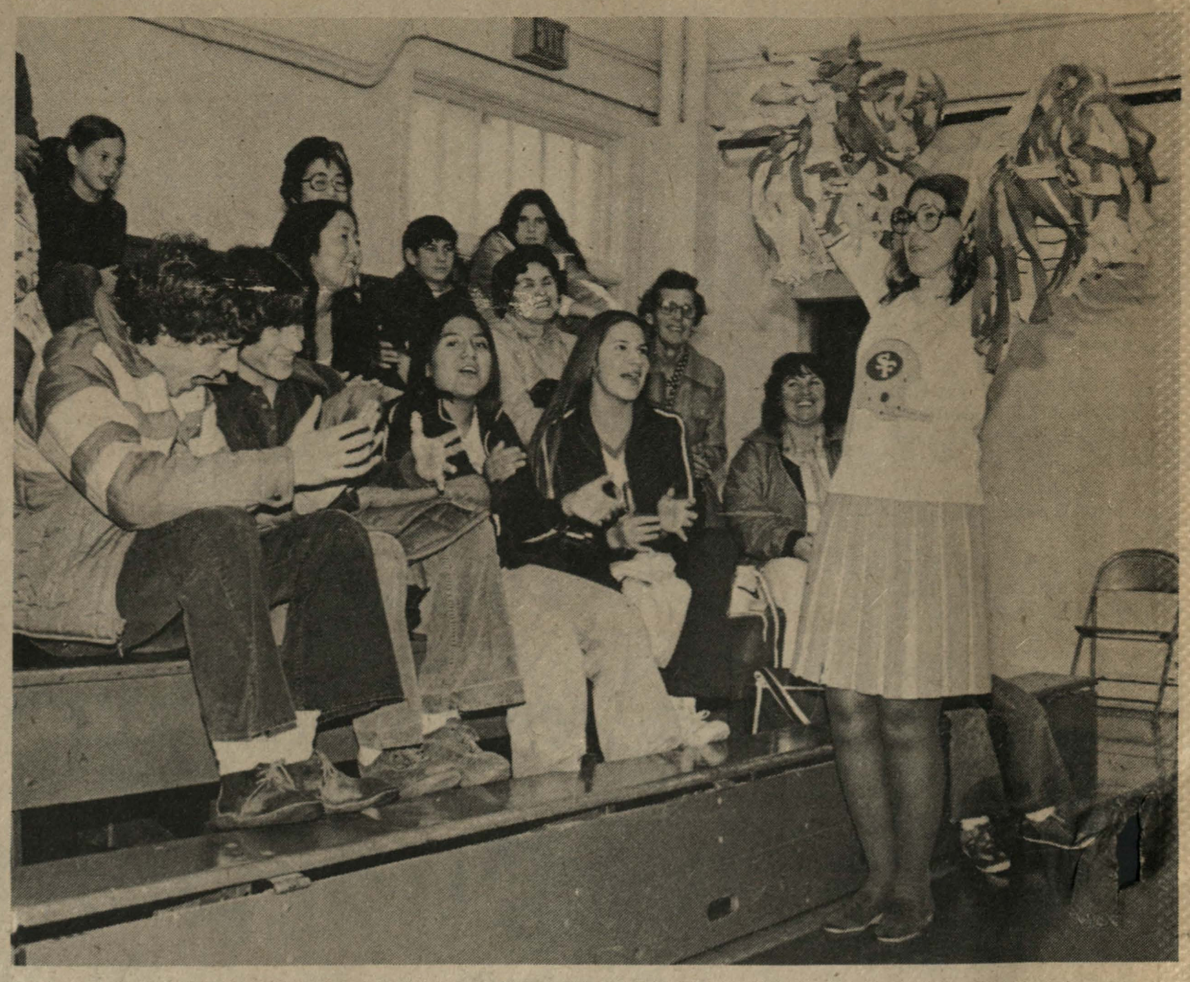
Tickets are still available at the chamber office, 93 S. Central ave. or by calling 378-6252. Tickets are $13 per person.

Jeanette Watson, long time Campbell resident, former chairman of the Civic Improvement Commission and unofficial curator of the Campbell Museum will be installed as chamber president that night.

Others to be installed include; Mike Kotowski, president-elect; Homer Hyde, vice president of economic development; Alvin Jackson, vice president of community development; Larry Dodson, vice president of legislative development; Pete Edwards, vice president of membership and board members Doug Boyce, George Berris, Phil Olivarri, Ron Harvell, Jack Holmes, Bobby Luoto, Bill Hedley, Stan Roberts and Harvey Green.

The highlight of the evening will be presentation of the Citizen of the Year award for 1977 by last year's recipient Ed Fabbri. The honoree, kept secret until that evening, was selected by a five member committee made up of former recipients.

Other highlights this Friday will include the Prunes 'A Poppin awards (and a special performance by one group), a chamber service award and the Mayor's award.



ACTING OUT her "wish" to be a cheerleader is Barbara Conant who is helping organize the 12th annual Campbell Chamber of Commerce Installation and Recognition Banquet this Friday, Jan. 27 at Sunsweet Hall. Above, Barbara found an enthusiastic group to lead at the Campbell High School gym last week. And they even overlooked her San Francisco 49'ers sweater. Banquet goers are encouraged to attend dressed in the "I Wish I Were . . ." theme, whether it is a hobo, super hero, millionaire or cheerleader.'

Sales tax sharing weathers the storm

Santa Clara County and its cities will continue their longstanding agreement to share sales tax revenues after disagreements had threatened to scuttle the multi-million dollar sharing pact.

Specifically, the Santa Clara City Council, which threatened to withdraw from the pact and end the sharing for others, "withdrew its withdrawal. Sunnyvale councilmen also went along with the pact.

Councils apparently have been soothed by the county's promise to finance Santa Clara and Sunnyvale 911 communications system. The county's share of sales tax money is used to amortize mortgage costs of county buildings. The county would like the communications systems merged.

Councilmen in the two cities had argued they contributed more of their sales tax dollar than they got in county services.

Hospital proposal nixed by council reject the plan, seconded by Councilman Dean Chamberlin. The vote was unanimous.

O'Connor Hospital is still interested in acquiring the license, building and grounds of the trouble-plagued hospital, but Administrator Rodney Aymond said Monday he doesn't expect to be making any announcements about the sale before Feb. 10.

REPORTS THAT O'Connor employees were moving furniture out of Campbell Community last week led to speculation that the sale had already gone through but Aymond denied this.

O'Connor did purchase perishable food stuffs and medicines in a straight sale transaction with hospital owners, Aymond explained, and employees were moving these things out.

Aymond met last week with Mayor Bill Podgorsek, Councilman Dean Chamberlin, City Manager Bob Stephens and Chamber executive Ted Rogers to explain O'Connor's "generalized" plans for the facility and to seek their support.

The administrator told officials they plan to transfer the 50 acute beds, if the sale goes through, and use the Campbell facility for short surgical procedures in which patients are in and out in one day, Podgorsek noted.

"I assured him I saw no hang up with the city on his plans," the Mayor added.

But O'Connor could have a hang up in reactivating the license, placed in suspense by Campbell Community, and getting it transferred to another location.

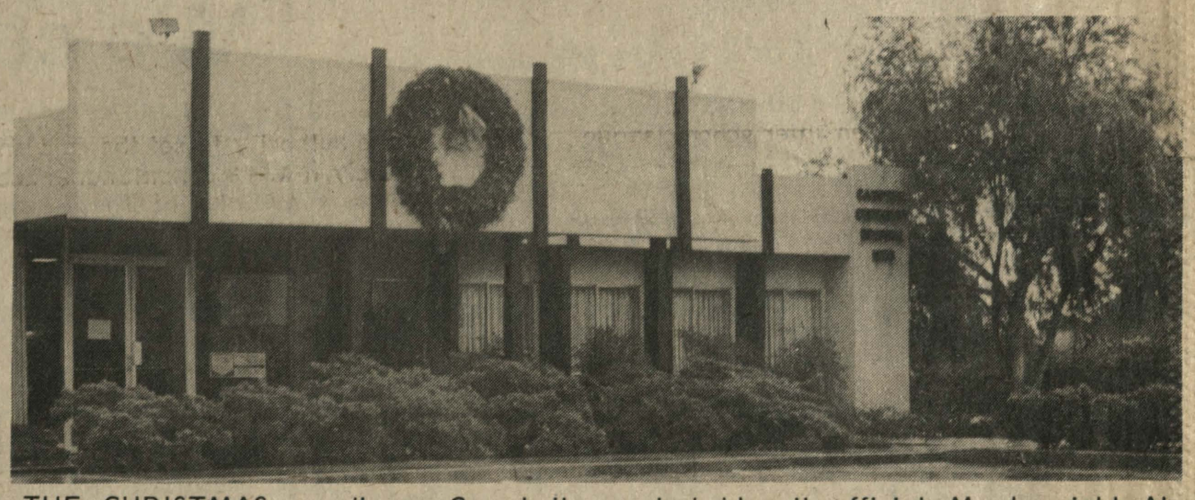
ACCORDING TO Paul Gould supervisor of inspectors for the state Department of Health, O'Connor has put in a tentative request indicating this is a condition of sale.

Gould said he responded with a letter stating he sees no reason why the state health department wouldn't issue the license to O'Connor.

But the bid to transfer the 50-beds as an extension of their present hospital could cause some technical difficulties, Gould added.

"The way they've applied is not the easiest way," he noted.

In order to obtain permission for the transfer O'Connor would have to apply first to the county Health Services Agency and that group would make their recommendation to the state Department of Health. The final say in the request would be made by Dr. Saleem Farag in the department's Sacramento headquarters.



THE CHRISTMAS wreath on Campbell Community Hospital, 1650 Winchester blvd., is a reminder that the local facility closed its doors on Dec. 24. A proposal to raise funds to reopen the hospital and improve facilities with the city's help was rejected by city officials Monday night. At last report, O'Connor Hospital was still negotiating to purchase the building, land and 50-bed license.

So many restaurants are closed on Sun. or Mon. nites that it can be a problem. When I plan a dinner then, I think of SIRLOIN AND BREW UNLIMITED because I know they are open every nite from 5 p.m. It's so easy to visit their Belmont, Saratoga or Fremont location for one of my favorites: V.I.P. steak. For just $4.79 I receive steak done to my liking, baked potato w/sour cream, all the salad I wish from their Gourmet Salad Bar, plus all the wine (chablis or burgundy) I want. Or I can choose unlimited beer or sangria. It surely beats staying home to cook & the price is right! See you there next Sun. or Mon.!

"Lighthouse," a great new group at CLEMENTINE'S, is really packing the house . . . it's generally a 4-piece band but the last time friends of mine stopped by, several other musician friends had been sitting in & it was very entertaining. CLEMENTINE'S is a restaurant by which you can always find something amusing in their decor (which is reminiscent of the 1930 Flapper Days), or just simply savor their great new Continental cuisine which is receiving raves from readers. Situated in the Stfd. Shp. Ctr. — CLEMENTINE'S is a must!

A reader just telephoned to thank me & to convey their appreciation to Mgr. Derwyn Blanchard at the LOS GATOS LODGE . . . their Family's Senior Citizens have enjoyed the spec. dinner hour designated for them (4-6 p.m.) & the very reasonable prices attached to the delicious dinners. They thought the idea of a inexpensive Senior Citizen dinner was simply excellent & wished other restaurants would follow suit. So, my hats off to Mgr. Derwyn & his Chef Wilhelm who are featuring the Senior Citizen's dinner 7 days a week at the LOS GATOS LODGE.

Have you ever wished to go out for dinner, but hesitated to take the children?? A great family restaurant is the HWEI FU SHING in Palo Alto — they welcome children & usually the kiddies w/end up w/an extra cookie or two, you can be assured. Chef/Owner Pang On Lwi has been associated w/some of the best restaurants in S.F. & also in far off Burma & also serves a variety of Peking cuisine — try the Crispy Chicken or perhaps the Curry Beef & the Spicy hot Shredded Pork is delicious. Just a suggestion.

For a change of pace, & if at times you feel as though you'd like to stop by a small take-out restaurant that's clean & fresh, I can recommend DANA'S FISH & CHIPS in Mt. View. Owner Kim features a variety of deep fried Seafoods served w/French fries & cole slaw, & there's about 10 tables to accommodate you. Or treat Mom to a night away from the stove & purchase some food to take home. Just a suggestion!

HANCIE MAY NAYLOR

Private services were held last Tuesday for Hancie May Naylor, 87, who died Jan. 15 after a long illness.

A native of Colorado, she taught at the Campbell Grammar School for 33 years before her retirement in 1954.

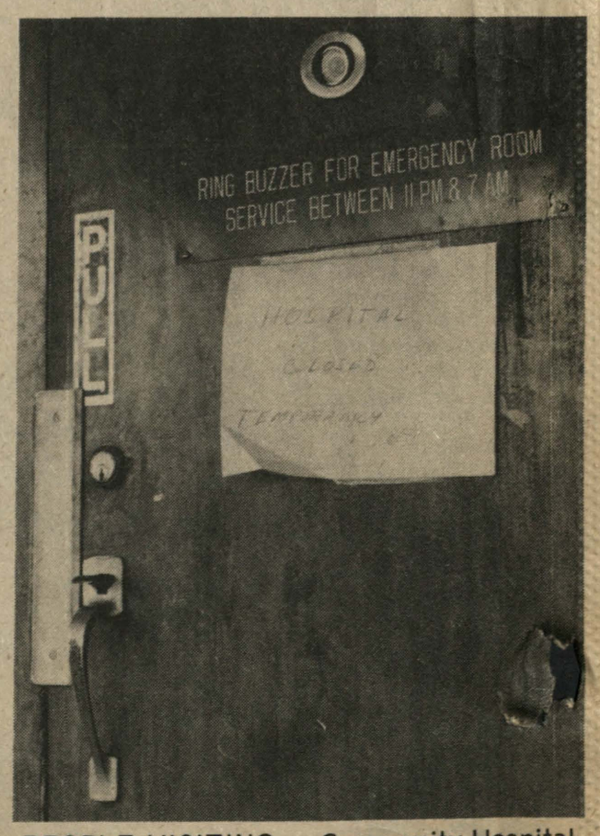
After her retirement she did extensive traveling and later spent two years teaching in El Salvador.

During her many years in Campbell she lived on Alice ave. and was a member of the Congregational Church of Campbell.

Surviving is a sister, Jessie Boyrie of Walnut Creek.

Darling-Fischer Campbell Memorial Chapel handled local arrangements.

Burial was at Mt. Hope Cemetery in Morgan Hill.



PEOPLE VISITING the emergency entrance to Campbell Community Hospital are greeted with this, "Hospital closed temporarily" sign on the door. City councilmen, concerned over reports that people are seeking emergency medical help at the closed facility, directed Mayor Bill Podgorsek to send a letter to hospital directors asking they either cover or remove the emergency sign. The city is also expected to remove the "hospital" directional signs on nearby streets.

A missing rule book caused it

Nationwide interest focuses on local high school coed on wrestling team

By PAT SAFFORD

THE NATIONWIDE interest and controversy that centered around the Campbell High School gym last week was the result of a missing rule book, Principal Bud Baldwin explained last week.

Media from throughout the area, and 600 spectators, descended on the local high school on Jan. 17 to watch 105-pound Brenda Nunes become the first girl in the nation to wrestle on a high school team. They went away disappointed after the Leigh High School wrestling coach declared he'd rather forfeit than let his 105-pound wrestler compete with a girl.

By the time the Thursday scheduled game with Westmont rolled around, the rule prohibiting Brenda from competing had been nailed down. But by this time, the story had gained nationwide attention. Earlier that day the Board of Managers of the West Valley Athletic League, made up of high school principals, reaffirmed that ban adopted several years ago after several girls went out for local high school football teams and didn't make it. The ban covers football, wrestling and basketball.

BALDWIN EXPLAINED how the whole thing came about.

The League was redoing their constitution and found that several principals didn't have their rule books up to date. Several principals, including Baldwin, left their books with the League secretary at Commissioner Haskell Bowen's office to be updated.

It was at this time, Baldwin said, when Coach Rich Kuenhis told him Brenda would be competing in the 105-pound classification.

"I told him I thought it was illegal," Baldwin explained, but, when the coach asked for the specific section dealing with the issue of girls competing in contact sports, the principal didn't have it. Instead, he called the regional and state interscholastic federation offices on Monday and was told there is nothing prohibiting girls from competing on those levels.

JUNIOR varsity wrestler Brenda Nunes of Campbell High School created a nationwide stir last week in her bid to become the first girl to compete in an inter-school league. Above, she is inverviewed by reporter Jim Avila of channel 5, one of several newscasters and reporters on the scene. In deciding to uphold their former ban on girls in certain contact sports, the Board of Managers of the West Valley Athletic League held a spirited three-hour discussion. Their research also included a check with the County Counsel's office. They were advised they had the authority to set the rule and, that ultimately, it was a constitutional question. Brenda, a member of The Pirettes (drill team), says the issue isn't dead yet. But she hasn't decided on the next step.

(Photography by Dick Sparrer)

WEST VALLEY Athletic League Commissioner Haskell Bowel responded to Baldwin's query Tuesday with the statement, "We're letting it go on," Baldwin said. "I had no alternative," he added.

On Wednesday morning, when the issue had already captured statewide attention, George Buonocore, Westmont principal and chairman of the Board of Managers called Baldwin and cited the local rule. He suggested the matter wait until the Thursday board meeting for a final decision.

Buonocore explained last Friday the reasoning that went into the board's reaffirmation of that ban.

"One factor was possible injury," he said, and we were concerned about a boy facing a girl. At least at this stage they (the boys) may be at a disadvantage, he added.

"If we had started the season (with girls competing) it might have been different," Buonocore explained, "but to learn just 24 hours beforehand creates a very difficult situation."

COACHES FROM the eight league high schools were reportedly contacted during the three-hour session Thursday morning. They all stated either they, or their boys, were opposed to wrestling a girl and would forfeit the matches. That might have left Brenda Nunes the undefeated champion locally at the end of the season, with a shot at a regional championship without a single match.

"There's no question girls can compete with boys," Buonocore declared Friday. He cited track, swimming and softball. e also feels there could well be a change in the ban on contact sports at some future date.
and softball. He also feels there could well be a change in the ban on contact sports at some future date. attention this incident captured but he understands how boys feel.

"It was a definitely a lose-lose situation (for them)," he added.

Praise for Brenda's efforts came from Mac Martinez, a member of the Campbell Union High School District Board of Trustees. Martinez said he was proud of the way Brenda conducted herself and proud of the school administrator (Baldwin) for the moves he made and the leadership he showed.

LOCALLY, OPINION from adults ran about three to one against letting girls compete in contact sports, such as wrestling. With coaches the opposition was almost unanimous.

But most Campbell High School students were clearly in her corner by Thursday afternoon when the ruling became known. And, if she plans to contest that ruling, she'll need all the help she can get, according to Baldwin.

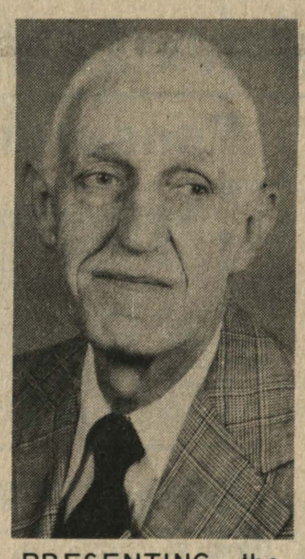
"I met with Brenda (to advise her of the board's decision)," Baldwin said. "And I explained she could use the appeals process through the California Interscholastic Federation. I also told her, 'If you plan to appeal this you're in a bigger fight than any wrestling match you would get into'."

If the decision is appealed, the ultimate ruling could come from the State Supreme Court.

RETIRING after 11 years as a security guard at Applied Technology Ed Bennett of Campbell, a Congressional Medal of Honor recipient for heroism in World War Two, accepts congratulations from Dr. John Grigsby, company president (left) and Harry Wilson, vice president of employee relations. Bennett, 57, also received gifts at the surprise luncheon in his honor at work.

The best kept secret will be told Friday

One of the best kept secrets in the city will be revealed this Friday evening as the 1977 Citizen of the Year is named by the Campbell Chamber of Commerce.



PRESENTING the Citizen of the Year award for 1977 this Friday night at the annual Chamber of Commerce banquet will be Ed Fabbri, retired bank executive, who received the award for 1976.

The award caps the gala dinner-dance installation to be held in Sunsweet Hall at The Factory.

Last year's award winner, Ed Fabbri, will make the presentation.

The first "citizen" named was in 1960 when Merv Nelson was selected. For the next seven years the award went to members picked as Chamber member of the year.

In 1968 the awards program broadened in scope to include those who have made contributions to the betterment of the entire community and Jeanette Watson, who will be installed as Chamber president Friday, was the first recipient.

Later winners were: William (Ben) Gould, 1969; Neal Royer, 1970; Norm Paul, 1971; Homer Hyde, 1972; George Vierhus, 1973; Dean Chamberlin, 1974; Edith Morley, 1975 and Ed Fabbri, 1976.

Rusty Hammer

Testing the political waters for state race

Rusty Hammer, who made history as the youngest mayor in the state in 1975, may be seeking a spot in the state assembly this November.

The Campbell city councilman, who served as mayor in 1975 at the age of 21, will be the honored guest at a $25 a plate dinner-roast on Friday, Feb. 10, at Lou's Village restaurant in San Jose.

Hammer is seriously considering seeking the Democratic nomination for the state assembly race against incumbent Richard Hayden, he said.

Whether he runs or not depends on several factors, including the response to the dinner invitations sent out by the Citizens for Hammer Committee last week.

The city official has been active in Campbell since he was named to the first Campbell Youth Advisory Commission while still in his mid-teens. In 1973, in a vigorous campaign, Hammer beat an incumbent to win a seat on the City Council. He is now in his second term.

The 22-year-old man is employed by Nuclear Services of Campbell as a corporate relations coordinator and is working on his master's degree at San Jose state university.

He presently serves on several county-wide boards including the Santa Clara Valley Employment and Training Board, the Economic and Social Opportunities Board of Directors and the Santa Clara Valley Health Systems Agency.

The dinner committee has lined up an impressive array of political talent to serve as "guest roasters" for the dinner. They include State Senator Al Alquist, State Assemblywoman Leona Egeland, County Supervisor Rod Diridon, Campbell Mayor Bill Podgorsek and San Jose Councilwoman Suzanne Wilson, among others.

RUSTY HAMMER

"My decision to run greatly depends on learning the advice of my friends," Hammer says in a letter accompanying the dinner invitation. It also depends on the number of those supporters that pay $25 into a possible campaign fund for Hammer.

If Hammer goes ahead he'll have to file a statement of intent to seek the nomination on or before Wednesday, Feb. 8, and nomination papers by March 10.

If he wins the June 6 primary, Hammer will be facing Hayden this November.

Senior day care funds low

Capitol News Service

Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy told reporters he is disappointed the governor did not allocate more money in his 1978 budget for senior citizen day care center projects.

The day care projects have been proposed as an alternative in some cases to nursing home placement for older Californians who are limited by physical disabilities and illness.

McCarthy noted that the budget calls for the same senior citizen day care expenditure as in 1977, $2 million dollars.

"We've got to do a lot more than that," he commented, vowing he will attempt to secure more money through the legislature.

The speaker criticized "the continuing overcommitment of elderly Californians to nursing home facilities when alternatives could be made available."

He added that he has been talking with Brown on the issue but at this point it's an unwon argument."

Policy is the job of school trustees

We believe the decision reached by the Board of Managers of the West Valley Athletic League last week raises a serious question. Nine high school principals, sitting as the Board, reaffirmed the prior local regulation excluding girls from participating in contact sports in the league which includes all eight Campbell district high schools and Los Gatos high.

That policy decision affecting students in those nine schools was made by a lay board in a closed three-hour session held at a Los Gatos motel.

We feel this provision of the league rules deals with basic constitutional questions and with an important policy matter which should have been reviewed and acted upon by our elected school representatives.

The Managers' decision not to allow participation of all students in certain public school-sponsored sports is not the question here, although it could be.

We wonder why a lay board is making policy decisions rather than the boards of trustees?

And we question the closed-door approach to reaching a decision. The public was appraised of their decision this matter which received nationwide attention, but not of the discussion and reasoning behind it. What information we have on that meeting is second hand.

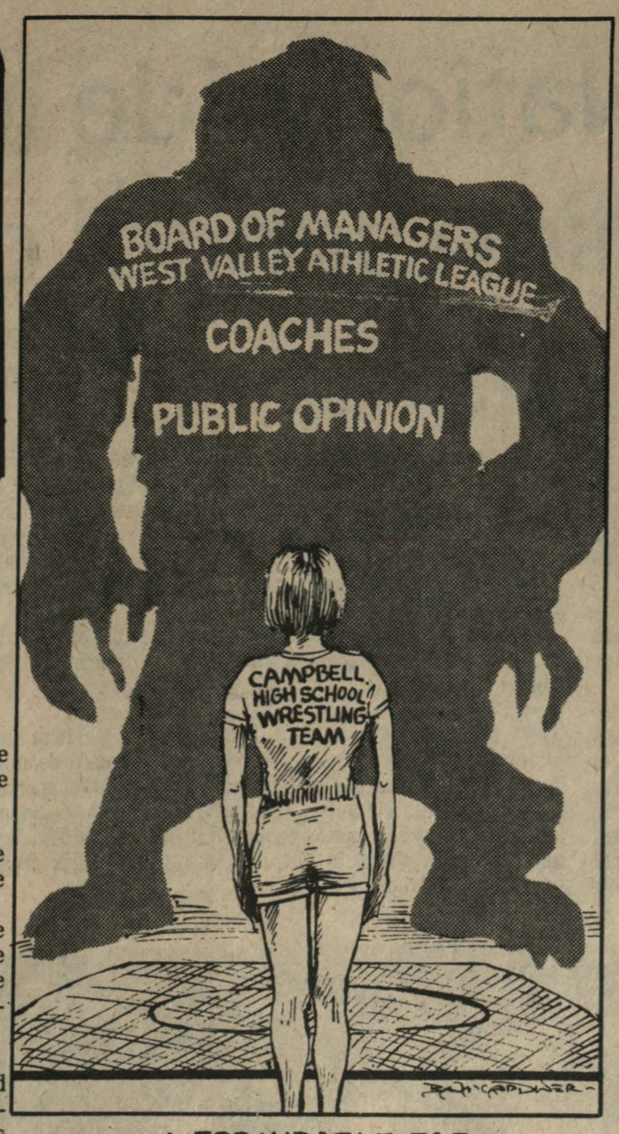
Should Brenda Nunes, or some other excluded athlete in the future, choose to test that rule you can be sure the school districts will be very much involved.

Our school tax dollars are used to support the league and the Board of Managers is made up of employees (the principals) of the two districts. Those who argue that the League is a separate agency which regulates and arbitrates inter-school sports programs ignore these facts.

Setting up the league schedule and handling disputed calls is one thing. Ruling that certain students are excluded from contact sports because of sex is quite another.

We feel that the Board certainly had the right to tackle the issue, and to make their feelings known. But we also feel the final say should rest with elected officials.

It didn't.



A FORMIDABLE FOE

R.O.T.C. STUDENTS SCATTER

A driver reportedly broke up a formation of the Campbell High School R.O.T.C. class last Friday morning by driving his car within two or three feet of the students. A rifle, valued at $100 was destroyed in the incident.

According to reports, the class was in formation in the staff parking lot off Winchester boulevard when the man made his first run close to the students. A rifle, left laying on the pavement, was run over. The rifle was placed to the rear of the R.O.T.C. unit and, moments later, the man reportedly made another sweep close to students with his car, running over the rifle again.

A few hours later a 19 year old man, driving a car with the same license number, was stopped by police for questioning.

He was arrested for giving false information to a police officer (he refused to give his name) and for outstanding traffic warrants.

The San Jose man denied being near the high school parking lot earlier that day.

PIANO BAR MISSING

Sometime between early December and last Friday a $1,000 piano bar disappeared from the storage area of the Black Kettle restaurant at The Factory, 93 S. Central ave.

According to reports, the restaurant was recently sold and the piano discovered missing when the storage area was checked.

MIDDLE AGED BANDIT

Campbell Plaza Theaters on Winchester boulevard reported one of their cashiers was robbed at gunpoint last Friday evening by a suspect described as about 50 years old with salt and pepper hair.

According to reports, the man escaped with a small amount of cash.

CARDIFF BURGLARIZED

The Cardiff Lounge on Union ave. reported a break in last Saturday morning.

Cash was reported stolen in the burglary.

Save this tiny 'limited resource'

While advisory commissions and the City Council are considering amendments to Campbell's General Plan dealing with open space and historic preservation, there's one spot we hope they won't overlook.

When the north loop street (Civic Center drive) was constructed, a small patch of land was left over adjacent to Ainsley Park.

At present, this land is being considered as a parking lot, in negotiations with one of the downtown property owners, to replace the spaces taken by the loop construction.

Ainsley Park would be greatly enhanced by including this small stretch of land which could accommodate more benches, trees, flowers or other amenities to soften the asphalt network of the loop streets.

The proposed addition to the Open Space Element reads: "It is the policy of the City of Campbell to recognize both open space and designated historic and cultural properties as limited resources necessary to the well being of the community."

That small piece of land is one of the few city-owned properties which truly fits the description set forth in the proposed element.

We hope the City will make every effort to preserve this "limited resource."

Upon the hazards of shopping for the common carpet tack

By HELEN ADDLEMAN

Recently, I had need of about a dozen carpet tacks for a minor home repair job.

I stopped in a well known hardware store feeling sure that I had chosen the correct place for such an item.

For some time I was thoroughly fascinated by all the greatly enhanced departments with all the modern and mysterious gadgets, repair tools and "do it yourself" kits.

Then I remembered I had come for carpet tacks, so I subdued my interest in all new forms of inventions and, after a long search, I found the aisle that showed great promise.

There were nails and screws of all description: nuts, bolts and mysterious fasteners of all length and sizes; some in steel; some in brass; some in aluminum; some with a coated preparation making them rust proof; and so on and on but no carpet tacks.

A chill of helplessness came over me and I looked around for a clerk.

Before long I learned that finding such a person was more difficult than finding tacks.

Perhaps they were out on coffee breaks or out on some special holiday for clerks.

Ah, at last I found a nice young girl hiding behind two large shopping carts which were stacked with more new gadgets for the shelves.

"Please, Miss, would you tell me where I could find some carpet tacks?" I asked.

I soon discovered that I had opened up a discussion that might go on for days.

"What length do you want?" she asked. "Would you be interested in our new line of hammered head upholstery tacks?"

"No, just plain carpet tacks," I answered.

"Well, now let me think, We had some last week but only in packages of 1,000."

I really wanted to say that I had not considered opening up a hardware store but I restrained such a remark for I was afraid she might direct me to a bookstore to look for a book on "Opening up a Hardware Store."

Her explanation continued, "Now tacks were in this department but, since we grew rather crowded, I believe they placed some of our articles in the plumbing department."

So, I marched off to the plumbing department and, on the way, I kept wondering how the plumbers were getting along these fastening water pipes together with tacks.

Maybe the plumbing bills would be lower, but on second thought, if the plumbers had as much trouble finding tacks as I was having, hours of labor would be added.

No, that would not work.

Upon my arrival in the plumbing department, I was immediately intrigued with the hundreds of sizes of connections for pipes.

I felt that if I ever needed the correct size for any bathroom fixtures that all I would have to do would be to completely tear down all works in the bathroom, then bring in the broken part and match it up.

Of course, if that happened all connections would have been moved to another department or just discontinued.

Suddenly, I came upon a creamy colored fuzzy little rug, just right for my bathroom.

I was just about to pick it up when something underneath moved, and behold, up came a clerk who had been fixing the lower shelf.

The rug turned out to be his blond wild permanent.

I was about to ask the name of his hair stylist, then I remembered . . . carpet tacks.

I gained confidence in this nice young man for he wore such nice badges, such as "Just ask us, we will help" and "At your service, anytime."

However, this promising creature directed me to the lumber department and, as I left him, I spied a door that said, "exit."

Take it I did.

That is, the advice, not the door.

I cannot remember what it was I was going to mend but in case I ever recall, I'm sure I can use some wire I already have or needle and thread or just anything that will free me from a search for the impossible.

Yours for better shopping.

Research evident

EDITOR:

I wish to compliment your editor Pat Safford on the expose that she wrote on Campbell Hospital dated Jan. 19.

It was evident that there were many hours of research done.

There are many other people, like myself, who have been concerned about the situation and the true facts are now out.

Thank you.

GOOD SAMARITAN No. 2

Although the good Samaritan who helped pull a paramedic and a 14-year-old boy out of the flood swollen San Tomas Creek, Jan. 5, has not been identified, similar quick thinking action saved another boy that day.

Ed Poczulp, custodian for Forest Hills School, managed to reach a boy who fell into the creek behind the school in the nick of time.

That boy and another had also attempted to launch a raft after 5 p.m. that night.

Poczulp reportedly pulled the boy out of the swift current and sent him home but the raft just kept going down the rain-caused rapids.

Editor's note: I was happy to hear from you. We evidentally had an atypical problem in contacting people from the local chapter last November.

I'm one of the people who live on E. Central avenue, the street the city is thinking about a name change for. There are only seven people living on that street. I've been there for 52 years myself. I think they should keep the street name the same. I don't see any reason to change it.

George Le Warne

Editor's note: The recommendation came from city officials concerned about a possible problem in dispatching emergency services to addresses on E. Campbell ave., now cut off from N. and S. Central ave. by the railroad tracks. Your name was one of those suggested for the street. The Planning Commission recently referred the matter back to the Civic Improvement Commission asking that they come up with one recommended name for the street instead of a choice, which caused a deadlock on the Commission.

Has the Citizen of the Year been named yet? Does it have to be someone living? A group of children wanted to know if the late Ed Tonini could be nominated.

Wondering

Editor's note: The 1977 citizen award is scheduled to be announced this Friday at the Chamber of Commerce banquet, but the deadline for submitting names closed Dec. 30. As far as we can determine there is no requirement that the person nominated be living.

...Water facts...

Q: How are clouds seeded?

A: In Santa Clara Valley, because of the coastal range that creates updrafts, cloud seeding is done by ground base generators.

The water district has 18 generators located along the top of the coastal hills from the Saratoga gap to Watsonville and eastward to Hollister.

These generators are a propane flame about 3 to 4 inches long that is injected with silver ozide solution that creates microscopic particles lighter than air. These are carried into the storm clouds by wind created by updrafts.

Seeding is only done on clouds that would give rain normally, then seeding will increase rain 10 to 15 per cent. Seeding will not make rain, it will only increase it.

Cambrian issue to county counsel

Who controls the fire station?

A MEETING between city, school and county officials last week didn't help settle the Cambrian fire station issue. But it did give County Counsel two questions to answer.

First, is the county Board of Supervisors or Cambrian school officials in charge of the fire station at Curtner and Bascom ave? And second, did Chief Bill Payne of Central Fire District err in requesting continued use of that vacant station for storage through June 30 from school trustees?

Supervisor Dominique Cortese posed the questions after last Wednesday's meeting at the Cambrian School District offices. Mayor Bill Podgorsek and City Manager Bob Stephens of Campbell were on hand, along with Sonny Towner, chairman of the board of trustees, Superintendent Phil Barrone, and Cortese.

Chief Payne was invited to attend the meeting but couldn't attend because of a prior commitment.

CAMPBELL WOULD like to use that station, vacated by San Jose when they took over fire protection for that area last year. The plan locally is to use the station to house a third engine company for Campbell until a new facility is constructed near the Bascom-Campbell ave. intersection.

City officials originally requested use of that station from Cambrian trustees but Chief Payne, in a letter to the city, indicated he feels the county, through the Board of Supervisors, has control over use of that station, at least through June 30.

On Dec. 13 Chief Payne requested and received permission fromschool trustees to use that station until July 1 for storage.

At last week's meeting Cortese questioned whether Payne had the authority to enter into that agreement with school officials. The county board of supervisors sits as the Board of Directors for the Central Fire Protection District.

Chief Payne said Friday he doesn't see anything improper in his dealings with school trustees.

"THERE'S NOTHING illegal about it," Payne declared. "We simply gave notice we will be terminating the usage in July." At that time, he added,control would revert back to the Cambrian School District.

The two questions are now in the hands of County Counsel and Cortese has asked for a quick reply.

Warn pregnant women about alcohol, Egeland urges

Capitol News Service

Assemblywoman Leona Egeland wants warning labels on all alcoholic beverage products declaring them dangerous to pregnant women.

The San Jose Democrat had earlier said she was considering introducing legislation to require the labeling on all alcohol products sold in the state.

But after assessing its chances for legislative approval, she has instead introduced a resolution (that does not carry the power of law) recommending the U.S. congress enact a label requirement statute.

If action does come at the federal level, alcohol product manufacturers could avoid double labeling for California and the rest of the nation.

But vigorous industry opposition to the idea remains.

Egeland said case studies have shown that pregnant women, drinking as little as two drinks each day, can be threatened with the disease.

Fetal alcohol syndrome has been known to cause major birth defects.

HELPING staff the Corinthian Thrift Shop, 1405 Hacienda ave., in the Rolling Hills Shopping Center, Marimerle Vaughn, assistant manager, displays some of the goods the shop sells. Donations are sold weekdays 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturdays noon to 4 p.m. to fund a home for the elderly in Campbell. Campbell City Council approval of the home, to be built at 250 Budd ave., came Feb. 28, 1977. A building permit for the three-story structure must be obtained within 18 months from the approval date. Nine months after building starts 75 units are to be completed with the remainder completed within four years in order to house a planned 104 residents and a manager.

'Courses by Newspaper'

SUN's going to take you to college

SUBSCRIBERS to this paper's SUN Magazine section will have a unique opportunity to earn college credits by home study, conserve energy, and enjoy some entertaining and informative reading all at the same time.

It's all part of our new "Courses by Newspaper" program, starting in the Feb. 1 issue of the SUN Magazine, which goes to all of our paid subscribers. Our newspapers are joining with three colleges in offering the course, "Popular Culture," over the next few months.

You can earn credits from Foothill College and Evergreen Valley College, or upper division credit from San Jose State University, through the new program.

Each week's issue of the SUN Magazine will bring one lively, illustrated article in the series — your "lecture" for that week. You can purchase the course books at the participating colleges' bookstores, and will have an opportunity to get together with the faculty and other students taking the newspaper course, at a few special sessions at the three colleges. And enrollment is as easy as sending in a coupon.

Topics explored in the 15-part series include popular culture as big business and arbiter of change, the themes of popular culture that recur in movies, music, sports and politics, and the heritage and future of today's popular culture.

From the Super Bowl to "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," from Dolly Parton to Elton John, "Popular Culture" takes you on a panoramic tour of the names, faces and events that everyone talks about. They're the people, places and things which make up our lifestyle. It's a course which promises fun along with the facts.

THE COURSE is under the direction of David Manning White, professor of Mass Communications at Virginia Commonwealth University and one of the first scholars to study and focus academic attention on this subject. Articles in the course are contributed by professors specializing in areas such as music or sports, as well as such authors as Betty Friedan and Alvin Toffler.

Courses by Newspaper was developed by University Extention, University of California, San Diego, and is funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities.

There is no fee to obtain credit from either Foothill or Evergreen colleges; students wishing credit from San Jose State will receive information about fees at that university.

Readers who would normally attend De Anza College will obtain their credits for the course from Foothill, which is coordinating the course for that whole college district.

Similarly, readers in the attendance area of San Jose City College would enroll for this course at Evergreen Valley College, and receive credits from Evergreen.

THE WEST Valley college district is not offering this course, but those of our readers who live in that district and wish to take the course for credit can do so, enrolling at Evergreen.

To enroll, send this coupon to the appropriate college or university, and you will be notified about any on-campus sessions, exam dates and other details.

And if you're not receiving our SUN Magazine section — essential to the course — call 255-7500 now. Your at-home "professor" will be delivered to your door each week.

It's no time for big moves, Moonbaby

For January 28 through February 3

ARIES (March 21 - April 19): Variety is more than just the "spice of life", Ari, it is what makes life worth living. Use imagination in dealing with loved one. Situation can be improved immeasurably. Week ends on key of B, for "Bingo!"

TAURUS (April 20 - March 20): You are basically generous, Taurus, but don't permit others to take advantage of your good nature. Some people stoop to flattery to get what they want. And bulls feel so comfortable when the flattery flys.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20): Try not to be picky, Gem. What you pick could too easily become unravelled, and heaven knows you haven't the time or energy this week to knit relationship back together again.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): Lie low. Week unfavorable for making important moves. Choices are offered. Try, just once, moonbaby to consider your own self-interest first.

LEO (July 23 - August 22): Secret game highlighted. Stakes are high, Leo, so play cards close to chest. As week wears on you may tend to wear out. If so, take French leave. Even a big strong lion needs a little R and R occasionally.

VIRGO (August 23 - September 22): Don't hesitate to take chance as far as loved one is concerned. There is risk in everything we do, Virg, but in your case the risk in everything we do, Virg, but in your case the risk is small compared to the gain to be had. Message clears.

LIBRA (September 23 - October 22): You have to do some letting go, Lib, and though it may not be a happy experience, events are just taking their natural course. Future will be more productive for your having taken this action.

SCORPIO (October 23 - November 21): Friendly vibrations abound. You get a chance to see beyond surface. Aquarius enters picture and you, Scorp, realize that you shouldn't take yourself so seriously. Week ends with a sigh.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22-December 21): Be outgoing this week, Saj. Establish priorities and then push. You get support from one who shares your philosophy. Believe in tomorrow. In fact, Saj. you might even believe in next week.

CAPRICORN (December 22 - January 19): If you have uneasy feeling that you are on treadmill leading to oblivion, take heart. New adventure warms in the wings. Be willing to bend . . . like the willow. You don't always have to be the sturdy oak, you know.

AQUARIUS (January 20 - February 18): Know what happens when you work, work, and have precious little play? You are crabby, crabby, crabby. Treat yourself to an emotional goody this week, Aquari. You're entitled.

PISCES (February 19 - March 20): You can head in new direction this week, Pisces. Financial growth and personal satisfaction highlighted. Take time for some fun before week is complete. Remember, you're only as old as your arteries.

Mixed reviews

Governor Brown received mild praise and not-so-mild cirticism for his state of the state address. Legislators were predictably mixed in their reactions to the Governor's ten-minute address.

Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy said he thought Brown would move more quickly in legislative matters during this half of the session than he had in the past.

Ins and outs of map causes concern

CONCERN OVER the tentative parcel map filed for the old Campbell grammar school property has led to a request by Campbell planning staff to meet with Campbell elementary school district staffers.

At the Planning Commission meeting last week the tentative map was continued for two weeks to allow time for that meeting.

According to Planning Director Art Kee, the concern is with the way the two separate parcels of the 11 plus acre site are divided. The district has indicated they'll retail about 3 acres for district office purposes and divide the remaining 8.05 acres for possible future sale.

Kee said planners are concerned with the way those 3 acres are divided. The land the district plans to keep includes a strip of property running south on N. Third st. to the intersection with Civic Center drive (the loop street).

KEE SAYS THE city has a concern for the possible future development of the remaining 8.05 acres since the only access to that property would be off Winchester boulevard if the main school building is retained by a future developer. No entrances or exits to property is allowed along Civic Center drive and that part of Campbell avenue.

One of those who has expressed interest in acquiring that 8.03 acre site is the City of Campbell who hopes to convert it to a neighborhood center and open space recreation uses.

According to Kee the present division of the property would prohibit allowing an increased intensity of use, since access would be limited and, in the case of southbound traffic on Winchester, would be across two lanes of traffic.

Jack Salsbury, assistant superintendent-business services for the school district said last Friday the tentative parcel map was drawn to the specific wishes of the district.

"I think it would be presumptious to assume what some future developer wants to use (the property) for," Salsbury said.

He said he feels future access from other parts of the property is possible.

nutrition notes / Salt addicts can break the habit

By DOROTHY TERRILL

Editor's note: Dorothy Terrill, a registered dietitian and instructor at De Anza College, holds an M.S. in nutrition from UC-Berkeley. Questions about nutrition are invited. Address all questions to: Dorothy Terrill, Nutrition Notes, Suburban Newspaper Publications Inc., P.O. Box 368, Cupertino, 95014. Mrs. Terrill will answer questions as space allows.

THREE GRAMS of salt a day is recommended for all Americans in the U.S. Dietary Goals. The average American diet now contains about 10 grams of salt. Reducing the intake to three grams daily means a reduction of from 50 to 85 per cent. Since the body only needs about one gram a day to maintain an adequate balance, the three gram recommendation is more than enough, although it is a light use of salt by current practices in this country.

Just how much salt is three grams? Three grams of salt is about 3/5 tsp. salt. Not a great deal when you consider how much salt is put into foods without our having anything to do with it. Salt is sodium chloride and the element sodium is the culprit to look for when reading labels. Sodium monoglutamate, sodium bicarbonate, disodium phosphate, and sodium ascorbate (vitamin C) are just a few terms that you will find as common ingredients of prepared foods.

One way to reduce total sodium intake is to buy as few convenience foods as possible. The more food that is prepared "from scratch" at home, the better chance there is for a lesser sodium content. One way that you can determine that the food eaten had a large sodium content is by your thirst after eating it. If you find yourself going for a drink of water more frequently than usual, you can be certain that your meal was quite salty. This frequently happens after eating a meal in a restaurant.

ANOTHER hidden sodium source is softened water. If you have softened water in the home, it should not be used for drinking or food preparation. Most people use unsoftened water from outside faucets for houseplants but continue to consume the softened water themselves! This can be avoided by having a separate tap of unsoftened water in the kitchen. Some people simply do not soften the cold water.

The taste for salt is an acquired one, not an inborn characteristic. At times it may appear to be inherited when several people in a family use salt heavily. However, it is more likely that they all learned to eat at the same table with the same heavy salt usage.

One way to limit salt is to remove the salt shaker from the table. An amazingly large amount can be consumed by the person with a heavy hand. Children should especially be watched so that they do not acquire a taste for heavily salted food.

Why worry about how much salt we consume? Salt is now implicated as a cause of high blood pressure and high blood pressure contributes to heart disease. The recommendation of three grams of salt a day is intended as a preventive health measure. By reducing salt intake to this extent, it is felt that fewer people will develop high blood pressure later in life.

Many other factors contribute to heart disease, too. Among these are obesity, lack of exercise, cigarette smoking, stress, and high levels of blood cholesterol. Some studies have suggested that heavy coffee drinking and insufficient sleep may be contributing factors, too.

In any event, the causes are multiple and most of them can be controlled by the individual if he chooses. Certainly, in the case of salt, consideration should be given to younger members of the family to prevent their acquiring an abnormal taste for salt.

How can you use less salt and still enjoy your food? Try using some herbs and seasonings instead of salt. Oregano, basil leaves, dill weed, caraway seeds, garlic and onion are just a few to start experimenting with.

Remember that each time you spice up a recipe with garlic salt, celery salt, savory salt, or seasoned salt you are adding just that — salt. And that salt means sodium. Try instead to use garlic cloves or powder, celery seeds, and other herbs mentioned.

Border patrol

Attorney General Evelle Younger is seeking state funds to set up a special border patrol mobile unit that will be responsible for checking stolen cars as they cross the Mexican border.

Younger said the patrols are needed to break the many professional auto theft rings that are transporting stolen vehicles south.

LUCKY OFFERS 1000's OF LOW PRICES... NOT JUST A FEW PRIZES!

A group that can change your luck

By JOHN WEILAND

HIS MIND leaping from throughts of financial troubles to suicide the "busted" gambler gazes dully about the smoke filled cardroom, his eyes focusing on a small poster that asks: "Does gambling create a problem in your life?"

Numbly he memorizes the phone number without taking one of the poster's pull-off tabs so no one will realize he has once again lost more than he could afford.

Working up his courage, he calls Gamblers Anonymous (GA).

On the other end of the line is Campbell businessman Dave Richards, a member of GA and, like all its members, an admitted compulsive gambler himself.

He tells the caller, if you want to quit, GA can help you.

"We don't quit gambling for anyone," he says. "We give them the tools to work with."

The organization is not religious, does not cost anything and does not force anyone to do anything, he tells callers.

The organization's main treatment is group therapy, patterned after Alcoholics Anonymous.

Gambling can be a harmful addiction, Richards said.

Although he has not gambled in six years and has been member of GA for 12 years, Richards admits he had a big problem.

"I CHASED MY money for 14 years," he said.

He admits he lost everything he owned due to gambling: his wife, his job, and his sense of values.

He loved gambling he said. It was the results he did not like.

Richards is not alone.

The U. S. Department of Public Health estimates there are six million compulsive gamblers in the United States.

GA in the San Jose area has between 800 to 900 members, Richards said. Over the past 18 years probably 5,000 people have come in for help, he added.

"There are about 15 people here in Campbell who belong," he points out, including an ice cream salesman, attorneys, teachers, and psychiatrists.

Compulsive gambling is an illness, according to GA literature. It can never be cured, but can be arrested.

Gamblers will do anything to get money for their vice including stealing, lying, and using their friends and family, according to Richards.

It can build up in a person to an obsession.

IN LATE OCTOBER, he said, a San Jose man "dropped" $90,000 in one night playing $800 limit lowball in a card room.

Also this past year a card room owner himself lost $76,500 in one game and before that a businessman lost $140,000 in one night losing his car dealership, the reformed gambler related.

GA has gotten the local card rooms and horse tracks to post GA materials for their patrons, Richards said.

The local problem is great. In this area most compulsive gamblers are card players, with about 10 percent playing the horses or gambling in Nevada casinos.

Bingo and sports are other major gambling activities. That's not all gamblers bet on, though.

RICHARDS SAID HE once bet another man $50 that his watch kept better time and called the phone company to prove it. He lost the bet.

Now Richards is a successful businessman who owns a machine shop on McClincy lane.

"I would not have anything today it if was not for GA," he said.

He claims a typical compulsive gambler can sit in a card room with $1,000 in his pocket, knowing the finance company is coming to repossess his car, and ignore it, compelled to spend the money on gambling.

One of his low points, he recalls, was the time he quit his job at 22, sold all his tools and tried to devote all his time to gambling.

Within a month he was broke and had to find a job.

ANOTHER TIME HE sat in a card room playing cards while his wife was having a baby.

At that time he would rationalize anything to keep gambling.

Today as a member of the National Council on Compulsive Gambling he helps others with gambling problems.

The GA organization went from two people in 1957 to 380,000 today.

"It works," he stated simply.

The local chapter, about 5 per cent of whom are women, meets Monday nights at 1224 Winchester ave., at 8:15 and has several members who have belonged for over 15 years, Richards said.

GA's auxiliary organization, Gamanon, shows the spouse, friend, and relative of the compulsive gambler how to deal with the problem.

GA is unique among organizations in that it will accept absolutely no contributions from outside the membership.

"It's the one group that would turn down a grant," Richards said.

HE RECOUNTED A story of a New York television sponsor which offered the group $16,000 but was refused.

Richards explains they do not need the money and think they should be self-supporting.

The San Jose chapter has about $35 in its treasury after 17 years, he said. The national headquarters itself only has about $5,000.

"We don't want the treasurer running off to gamble the money," he added jokingly.

GA has its own publishing company in Los Angeles, he explained, the main use for the small funds the members do expend.

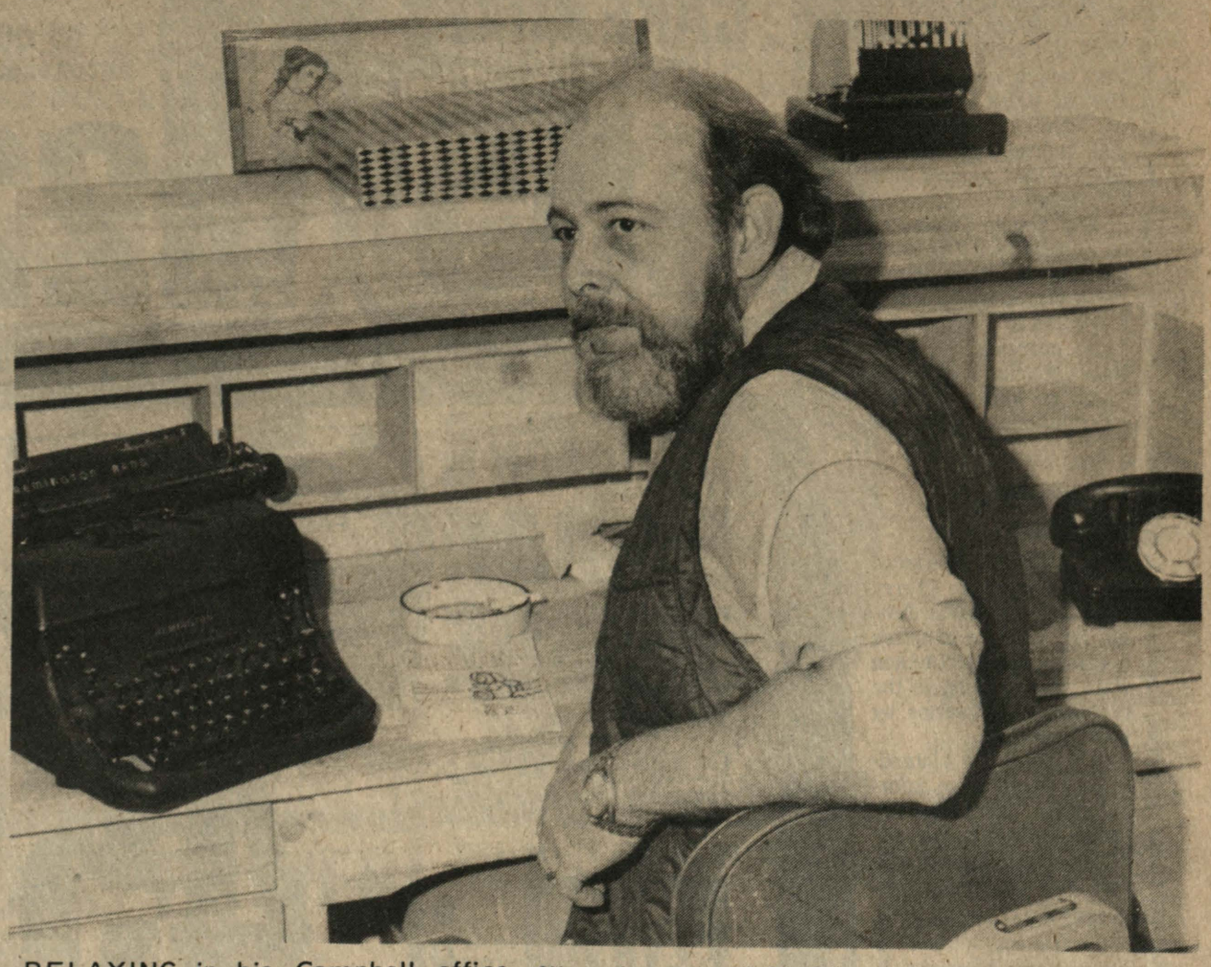
The answering service in this area is manned around the clock by people like Richards who are on call either at work or at home to receive the average two calls each daily.

Richards wants to do away with any misconceptions about GA.

It's composed of above average people, he said.

If you talked to a hundred members, he said, not knowing they were gamblers, you would not be able to guess what they had in common.

If they are like Dave Richards, though, the answer would be they have a fierce desire to quit gambling and help others with the same problem.



RELAXING in his Campbell office, ex-gambler Dave Richards reflects on his new life since he took a chance and joined Gamblers Anonymous 12 years ago. Now he is successful in his own business and helping other compulsive gamblers to quit.

Abolishing state agencies

Hearings have been set for legislation by Senator William Campbell, R-Whittier, which would provide specific dates for abolishing regulatory state agencies unless legislation is enacted that requires their continuance.

The Senate Committee on Government Organization is set to hear testimony on the bill, which is needed, according to Campbell, because currently there are state agencies in existence which no longer have responsibilities to carry out.

Possession of firearms

Legislation introduced by Assemblyman Terry Goggin, D-San Bernardino, up for policy committee hearings, would strengthen state laws relating to the possession of firearms by mental patients.

The legislation is intended to require more information for gun ownership under California law for easier identification of persons with a history of mental illness.

Exports easier?

Export shipments of California agricultural products have become a step easier under a new program announced by the state Department of Food and Agriculture. The program became effective January 1 and is expected to expedite food shipments from their point of origin.

Previous federal requirements of two "phytosanitary inspections" of shipments — one at the point of origin and another at the point of embarcation — have been cut in half. Shipments now need only be examined by qualified county inspectors at the point of origin.

Phytosanitary certificates, required by all foreign governments to accompany agricultural shipments, indicate that the shipment is free of pests and plant diseases.

The new program follows cooperative training efforts between federal, state and local inspectors. Under the procedure, most shipments will avoid delay or deferment previously due to a paucity of readily-available inspectors.

McAlister charges delay

Assemblyman Alister McAlister, D-San Jose, has charged the state Energy Commission with delaying information relating to the approval of the proposed Sundesert nuclear power plant, as required under legislation signed into law by Gov. Brown on Sept. 28.

McAlister, the author of the law he now says is close to being violated, explained that the commission is facing a Jan. 16 deadline to provide a report regarding availbale technology for nuclear fuel waste disposal and the federal government's responsibility in that area.

Under the law, the commission must also report if the Sundesert facility can be exempted from filing such information, if it finds a determination of nuclear fuel waste disposal technology cannot be adequately accomplished by the January deadline.

College funding

Policy committee hearings are slated to consider funding the state college system with $2.4 million to demonstrate new sources of energy in its buildings.

Too many school bills?

State Assemblyman Dennis Mangers announced a proposal for a two-year moratorium on the introduction of significant educational bills to the legislature. Mangers, a Democrat from Huntington Beach, claimed the backing of state schools chief Wilson Riles and a "number of other" legislators.

viewed the number of (educational) bills introduced recently," Mangers said. "There was an unusual number of very heavy bills of considerable magnitude."

He said his proposal is geared to giving the schools a "chance to catch their breath" in adjusting to all of the legislation.

"They (educators) are reeling from the new mandates . . . They've got enough to do right now without new stuff coming down the pike from the legislature," he added.

The lawmaker is currently on the Assembly Education Committee and the Committee for Educational Reform.

Aid for spouses

Legislation has been introduced to help spouses of deceased members of the State Teachers' Retirement System to collect benefits. AB 2107, authored by state Assemblyman David Stirling, eliminates a requirement that a member be married for 12 months prior to death before a spouse is eligible for benefits. The measure also redefines "spouse" as the person married to the deceased member at time of death.

Betting on Brown

In his first year as governor, Jerry Brown shocked lawmakers with a seven minute "State of the State" address before the legislature.

Since then some lawmakers, news people, staff members and other capital occupants have developed a system so at least one of them shall not be fooled in years to follow.

There were pools organized where guessing the length of Brown's annual oratory could win a few bucks . . . not to mention some statehouse notoriety.

This year's event, organized by Assemblyman William Thomas, R-Bakersfield, garnered a $62 pot for Assemblyman Gordon Duffy, a Republican from Hanford.

Duffy said he actually entered for his son who needs the money to fix an ailing sports car.

The governor spoke 9:55 while Duffy's guess was just two seconds off the mark at 9:57.

Some guesses ranged as long as thirty minutes.

Commercials and alcoholism

Governor Brown has been called upon to halt state-sponsored commercials which would attack alcoholism. State Assemblyman Robert Cline charged the commercials were tantamount to an attack on the state's wine industry.

The Northridge Republican said he intends to introduce legislation which would prohibit the state from spending money on television and radio commercials "unless they promote" California businesses.

Current reports indicate the Governor has expressed a wish to have the commercials modified to delete alleged sexual overtones inferred along the "wine, women and song" theme. He has denied, however, that any pressure was brought to bear on his office by the wine industry to modify or halt the commercials.

Asked if, in light of the announced changes, he would still introduce his proposed legislation, Cline responded there "is no question that there is a need" for it.

Commission proposed

The Assembly Rules Committee has approved a proposal to create an independent seven-member state commission to set salaraies and benefits for elected state officials.

The proposed constitutional amendment, from Senate Pro Tem James Mills, D-San Diego, has received strong backing from citizens lobbying groups and the Fair Political Practices Commission.

Restaurant okayed

Council overrules turn down by commissioners

The Campbell City Council unanimously reversed a decision of the Planning Commission Monday night and gave the go ahead to plans for a fast food restaurant at 70 S. San Tomas Aquino road.

Applicant Allan Harris argued in his letter of appeal that the Commission turndown was based on personal likes and dislikes of commissioners instead of on zoning regulations.

The Taco Charley restaurant is part of two developments planned for a large vacant parcel south of the Goodwill store in Campbell. A 26-foot high racquetball club has already been approved for the balance of the land.

Originally the Planning Commission was deadlocked, 3 to 3, on the proposal and, at the next meeting, turned down the application on a 4-2 vote with one commissioner absent.

"I certainly was not aware that the likes and dislikes of the individual commission members, i.e., do they like Mexican food or do they like sit-down restaurants in general, entered into the decision regarding zoning regulations," Allan Harris wrote. "My attendance at three meetings of the Planning Commission was witness to an emotional debate based on their particular likes and dislikes."

In denying the application the Commission found the site layout of the proposed restaurant "fails to provide a buffer or barrier" between the parking area and adjacent residential property.

"The site layout, therefore, does not meet the requirements of the site and architectural zoning ordinance that the commission finds the 'proposed development is compatible with the general plan and will aid the harmonious development of the immediate neighborhood'," the Commission concluded.

Attorney Tony Logorio representing the applicants got a laugh from the Council when he noted the Commission's finding was "highly specific. Just like Los Altos." Logorio is City Attorney to Los Altos.

He argued that the Commission was trying to exercise a zoning function when the property was already zoned to allow restaurants.

Earlier, planning staff had recommended approval of the project.

"A restaurant is a permitted use in a C-2-S zoning district," Planning Director Art Kee explained Monday. "The staff felt the layout was acceptable."

In reversing the Commission's ruling, the City Council added the stipulation that a masonry or concrete wall be constructed between the parking lot and adjacent residential property to act as a buffer.

Protection for women

A 20-hour course on how women can deal with a potential sexual assault is being offered at San Jose State University, the scene of numerous attacks on women last year. Officials said 37 women from teenagers to senior citizens are taking the course.

The course covers ways to avoid problem situation, psychological ploys against attackers and physical resistance.

HOLDING the crown, one of many prizes and honors to be won in the statewide California Little Miss Pageant, Feb. 26 and 27, are (left to right) contestant Margaret Madson, 11, of Campbell and 1977 pageant winner, Jill Wheland, 11, of Livermore. The pageant, to be held at the Santa Clara County Fairgrounds, still has applications open for interested girls between 9 and 12 years old.

Tales of woe told about Valley Medical

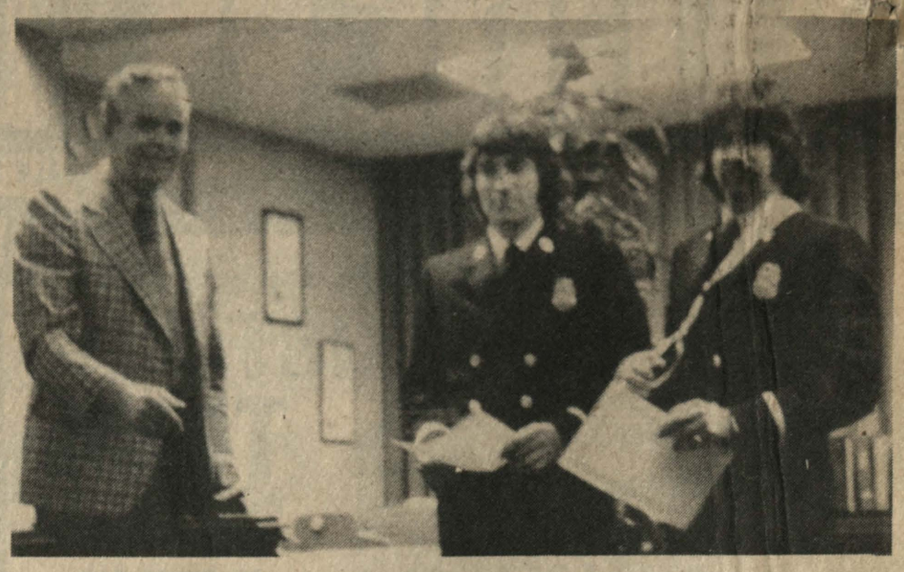
Long, long waiting periods and snippy hospital employees are some of the obstacles faced by emergency room patients at the Santa Clara Valley Medical Center, county supervisors have been told.

Supervisors have instructed VMC directors to increase emergency room staffing in nurses, attendants, clerks and instructors with some of these employees bilingual.

The board has been informed of numerous ghastly tales of emergency room patients having to wait five to seven hours for services. Staff members including physicians may have to undergo sensitivity training for emergency room service.

In a related VMC matter, Supervisor Dom Cortese has charged another supervisor (unnamed) violated the charter and is in conflict of interest over seeking of bids for private-firm management of the county-owned hospital. Cortese said he would make formal charges public soon.

Rod Diridon, one of two supervisors voting last December against seeking private management, countered the board majority violated state law in their action.



PRESENTING a letter commending paramedic-fire fighters Ray Rivero, right, and George Renshaw, center, for their heroism Monday was Mayor Bill Podgorsek. The two placed their own lives in danger Jan. 5 when they rescued Paul Amato, 14, who was being swept down San Tomas Creek. The resolution from the City Council notes "this rescue constitutes an act of valor which warrants the gratitude and recognition of the entire community."

Camden high concern

Crossing an 'expressway' on the way to high school

Camden High School students, faculty and administration are concerned about the proposed widening of Camden avenue from four lanes to six.

A recent student editorial in the high school's paper called for action on safety concerns for pedestrians, student drivers and buses.

The school, located at the corner of Union and Camden avenues, has a greater traffic problem than other high schools in the area, says Principal James M. Crawford.

"I have fears that when this becomes an expressway, the traffic will become faster than ever," he said.

In the 15 years he has been principal, Crawford said there have been no fatal accidents but there have been three serious mishaps and innumerable fender-benders due to traffic problems near the school.

Crawford also admitted there is a problem with student who jaywalk.

"The situation needs attention," according to Kathy Clifton, Camden High School teacher.

Jim Gillespie, Deputy Superintendent of the Campbell Union High School District, has been in on the negotiations with San Jose but concedes the city has the jurisdiction over the matter.

"They didn't need us," he explained. "They would have gone ahead anyway."

The district expressed its concerns to the city and feels the proposed plan answers them, Gillespie added.

The district dedicated a four-foot strip, 1,200 feet long on Camden avenue to accommodate the city's plans for a bus lane and cutouts which only the buses could use, he pointed out.

In addition, he said, the city will provide a pedestrian barrier in the center median to prevent jaywalking and will widen the student parking lot's driveways to facilitate right hand turns.

Gillespie's prime concern was for the increased traffic's effect on student drivers going directly into the cross lanes of traffic.

The city has not been unaware of the problem, though. Ed Lewis, Principal Civil Engineer for the project, claims the main thing holding it up is the inspection of the plans by the federal government.

Although the plans have been in the works for years, he said, the Federal Aid Urban Project contributes 83 percent of the funding and oversees the standards by which it is done.

The projected date for contractor bids is the end of February, he said.

In that case the contract may be awarded in March and construction begun in April or May.

The city recognizes the needs of the school, but is faced with an immediate need to accommodate increased traffic on Camden avenue, he said.

Lewis pointed out the improvements the city plans to make in the street includes adding sidewalks and wheelchair ramps.

In addition, the traffic signal at that corner will be modified for pedestrian convenience, he said.

Traffic on Camden avenue is constantly increasing, he pointed out and is already probably the most heavily traveled in San Jose.

The real solution would be an laternate route past the high school, but it doesn't seem to be foreseeable, he admitted.

CAMDEN high school coed Ruth Shifley eyes traffic congestion along busy Camden ave. San Jose plans to widen that stretch of road of six lanes as early as this spring but students, teachers and administrators are concerned over increased hazards for pedestrians.

Social Security still a good buy

ATTACKS ARE being made on the Social Security System from all directions, and it's time for some sober reflection. It is true that the system has some financial difficulties, that the legislatures are holding down benefits and that some groups have withdrawn in favor of private insurance programs. But the Social Security program is still the best game in town.

A joint study committee of workers and management has been meeting since October 1975 to study the possibility of withdrawing from the Social Securtiy system. Although the joint committee itself has not issued a report, the 715 members on the committee are firm in their recommendation that Santa Clara County workers should stay in the system. The main reasons for this recommendation are:

1. The law which allows public employers to opt out, also specifies that if they do, the employer must provide comparable benefits — this means there is no reason to believe that withdrawal will mean more take-home pay.

2. Social Security is more than a retirement plan, it is also survivors' and disability insurance. No private plan can provide this kind of coverage at a comparable cost. The real name of social security is OASKI — Old Age, Survivors and Disability Insurance.

3. The average PERS state retirement system payment is $300 per month. Not enough to live on without Social Securtiy.

4. The option to get out can never be reversed. If Santa Clara County withdraws, it is out permanently.

Planners vote 'no change'

Down zoning opposed by Apricot ave. residents

By JOHN WEILAND

The Campbell Planning Commission weighed heavily the opinions of the residents of Apricot avenue in considering a proposal to change the residential density of the street at the Jan. 17 meeting.

Over 30 residents appeared at the meeting to protest a change from high density residential to medium or low residential density because of feat that it would reduce the land value.

The Commission voted 4-1 to recommend no change in the zoning with chairman Peggy Pack the sole dissenter.

The proposal was generated by the city's concern over applications for new high density developments and the traffic problems of the area, according to Commissioner J. DuWayne Dickson.

The commission was considering down zoning the area to solve the problem, he said.

Commissioner George Vierhus, in response to the expressed concerns of the group of citizens observed dryly to the crowd's laughter, "My observation is that the people of this street don't want it changed."

Commissioner Pack, explained she favored the reduction in density as a matter of personal policy.

Bill Cunningham, 889 Apricot avenue, summed up the feelings of Apricot avenue's residents concerned with land values.

"It's a nice street and we like it but that doesn't take away that we can have apartments and still have a nice street," he said.

Another concern of the residents was the traffic on the street. Engineering manager Bill Helms met outside of chambers to hear suggestions from the various residents.

The narrowness of the street was its major traffic controlling characteristic, Helms said.

In other action, the commission:

• Referred to the sign review committee by a 5 to 0 vote (Commissioners Oleg Lubeckis and Daniel Campos were absent) an appeal of a decision of the Planning Director denying an application for approval of a 7 foot by 20 foot sign at San Tomas Foods, 651 W. Hamilton ave.;

• Recommended an amendment to the Land Use Element of the General Plan to the City Council and a change of zoning and approval of plans to allow construction of a 60 unit residential development at 1861 and 1961 Pollard road and 1536 and 1560 More ave.;

• Discussed the renaming of E. Central ave., voting 3-2 for approving the name Sam Cava Lane with Commissioner Don Hebard and Pack voting against it. Lacking a majority of the full commission, they then voted unanimously to refer the matter back to the Civic Improvement Committee for more recommendations;

• Approved 4 to 1, with Hebard dissenting, the application of William Rosen for plans to construct a 60 unit apartment complex at 3555 S. Bascom ave. in a high density zoning district;

• Approved 5-0 the application of the City of Campbell for plans to build a storage building at 290 Dillon ave. in a public facilities zoning district;

• Unanimously approved the application of Frank Gippetti for plans to construct an industrial building on 1460 Whiteoaks on a Light Industrial Zoning District;

• Continued the application of Richard Pasek for plans to construct a lumber storage yard on 925 McGlincy lane. The applicant will submit revised plans;

Stormy week for Buc girl

Nunes wrestles WVAL Board, but gets pinned

By DICK SPARRER and DAVE MENDONCA

WHEN THE Campbell high school wrestling team steps onto the Don mat to face Del Mar this week, there will be virtually nothing at stake for the Buccaneers in the West Valley Ahtletic League race.

There will be just a handful of loyal parents and diehard friends in the bleachers cheering for their favorite Buc to tackle a takedown, nail a near fall or perpetrate a perdicament.

All in all, except for the occasional excited screams for a Buc pin, it will probably be a rather quiet time.

But while those wrestlers go through the motions in the rather subdues atmosphere, they'll certainly be thinking back on time when things weren't quite so quiet during a Campbell wrestling match — when things were rather stormy.

And there will most likely be a young lady in that small crowd on Thursday who just last week was the center of that Campbell storm — Buccaneer junior Brenda Nunes.

Nunes is the young lady who last week went from anonymity to sudden stardom when she attempted to become the first girl to compete in an interscholastic wrestling program on the high school level.

But Nunes never got her chance on the mat. Instead of running into a wrestler wearing Leigh green or Westmont black, all she ran into was a forfeit and red tape.

NUNES AND a crowd of over 600 fans walked away disappointed on Tuesday, Jan. 17, when she was hit by a forfeit against Leigh instead of wrestling what she had hoped would be her inaugural match at 105 pounds in the junior varsity division.

And two nights later when she had hoped she'd finally get her chance against Westmont, Brenda was no longer even a member of the Campbell team because of a morning ruling set down by the West Valley Athletic League Board of Managers.

"I'm not going to let this thing fall," said Nunes after her frustrating week. "I'm undecided about whether or not to file a law suit, but I'm going to do something. I'm very upset about what's happened. I think it's come down to my constitutional rights."

The entire episode began quite innocently during Christmas vacation in 1977.

"I became super interested in wrestling during Christmas vacation," said the Campbell junior. "I stopped to watch a practice and asked some guys to show me some moves. Then I just learned more and more."

An Ohio court ruling that deemed it unconstitutional to keep girls out of boy's contact sports on the high school level got Brenda moving.

"I started working out last year hoping that the law might change," she said. "When they passed the law I thought that was for everybody."

"When I first started out I didn't realize that I'd get so much attention," she added. "At first it was fun. I was a nobody and now everybody knows who I am."

The Ohio ruling opened the door legally for Brenda, but she quickly found out that all she was really running into was closed doors.

IN WHAT WAS to be her first match on the boy's jv level, Brenda picked up a forfeit win when Leigh coach Bill Dauphin, who a day earlier had said "No wrestler of mine will ever lose to a girl," refused to send his wrestler to the mat.

"We didn't want to wrestle against a girl," admitted Dauphin calmly after forfeiting at the weight even though his 105 pounder sat above him in the stands. "I'm pretty sure it's against the rules anyway. It's in the rulebook and I think they'll have to default the match."

"I don't think they're doing the right thing from the standpoint of what we're trying to teach," he added.

"I'm really excited and disappointed at the same time," countered Campbell boss Rich Kuenhis. "I thought that Bill would have a match but I think he pulled back because of sex prejudice."

READY TO WRESTLE — Doing her leg stretching exercises during warm-ups, Campbell's Brenda Nunes was ready to wrestle last Tuesday night against Leigh. But the Longhorns backed down and instead of wrestling the Buccaneer junior, decided to forfeit the match. Two days later she was declared ineligible to wrestle by the WVAL Board of Managers.

Nunes, who ran to mat for her first match with the pep band striking up the theme from "Rocky" in the background, walked away from the mat disappointed.

"I don't think it's fair," said Nunes. "They have a man over there who can wrestle. If I have enough guts to walk out on the mat, then they should. I worked hard enough, and I'm good enough."

"Thursday she'll wrestle against Westmont," said Kuenhis after the forfeit. "I hope that (Roger) McClaughry will have different feelings about it."

But McClaughry didn't have different feelings about it — and neither did the WVAL Board of Managers.

"RIGHT NOW it's illegal according to our bylaws," said the Westmont coach last Thursday morning. "We'll not downgrade or degrade the sport of wrestling. All it is right now is a circus and I'm not going to be a part of a freak show."

"It doesn't do the sport any good, the boy any good or the girl any good," he added. "It's a sad situation."

But it was a situation that never came to pass because of the Thursday afternoon board ruling that made Brenda ineligible for further competition in WVAL wrestling.

"I'm upset because I worked really hard," said Brenda. "I'm interested in wrestling, whether it's with boys or girls or whatever — I want to wrestle."

"I'm looking into what I can do now," she added. "I'm going to do something as soon as I can."

When Brenda started her wrestling career her support grew.

"My dad was against it, he doesn't think it's very ladylike," she said, even though her father attended what was to be her first match. "My mom didn't think I was serious at first, but when I cut my hair and nails she gave me a lot of support."

"The team is all behind me and so are my teachers, coaches and classmates," she added.

But maybe her teammates weren't as supportive as Brenda might have thought.

"When I first heard about it I thought it was pretty good, but now I'm not so sure," said Campbell 97 pounder Jeff Scybold after his jv match. "A lot of the guys don't like it and a lot of them do."

"She works pretty hard, she's pretty good for a girl," said the wrestler who often faced Brenda in practice sessions.

Nunes got widespread attention during her short wrestling career. Her story appeared on at least five area television stations and in countless newspapers across the country.

AS THE attention remained centered on Brenda despite continued action in the center of the arena, Campbell Dean of Students Lloyd Gillespie, the man responsible for the extensive coverage, reviewed the situation.

"I hate to see this thing turn into a circus," said Gillespie, who contacted the media in a phone campaign the Friday before Brenda's first match. "If it hadn't been such a circus she probably would have wrestled."

"But it's the perogative of the kid and the coach at Leigh," he added. "I don't think that any 13 year old should be subjected to that."

"I do think that it's good to see this kind of turnout for the sport," he said.

Brenda approves of girls competing in athletic competition against the boys and also feels boys should be able to compete in girl's sports "If that's what he's interested in."

She added that girls should only compete with the boys if "they know what they're getting into both mentally and physically."

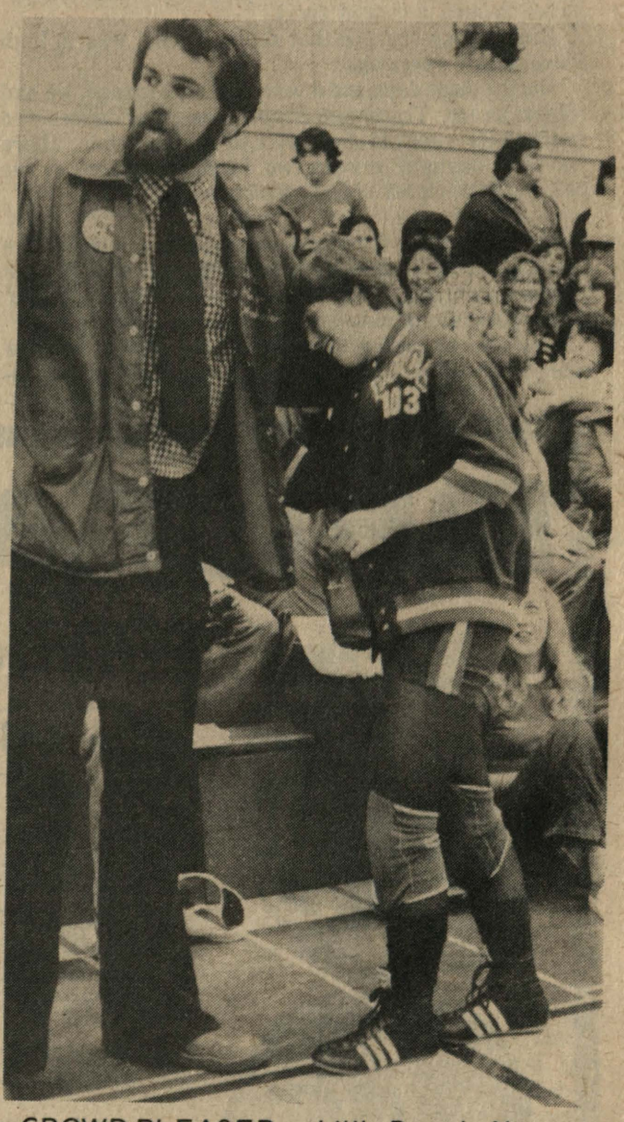
Kuenhis was very supportive of his first girl wrestler at and after the match. But a day earlier his views were a bit different.

"I guess I'm a male chauvenist, but I don't think girls belong on boys teams," he said. "But we've been forfeiting at that weight and she should have the opportunity to try."

Brenda may be finished as a high school wrestler. But with a brother-in-law in the law field, maybe not.

At any rate, she's raised quite a commotion in her one week on the wrestling team. And the issue is far from being settled.

QUESTIONS — Brenda Nunes became an expert at answering questions posed to her by numerous reporters during a hectic week at Campbell high school. Nunes was the center of controversy after trying to become the first girl to wrestle against a boy in high school athletics.



CROWD PLEASER — Little Brenda Nunes, shown here with Campbell wrestling coach Rich Kuenhis, was a real crowd pleaser last Tuesday night, packing the gym with some 600 people expecting to see the first girl-boy wrestling match.

Lane pin lifts WVC to wrestling win

WHEN WEST Valley College wrestling coach Jim Root was plotting out his club's Golden Gate Conference match with San Jose City College last week, the Viking boss doped it out as a toss-up.

Root had determined that each team would win five matches and it would be the team that accumulated the most pins and high point decisions that would come out on top.

Well, Root turned out to be half right last Thursday night. The Vike coach was wrong when he figured each team would win five bouts — his club won only four. But he certainly was right when he said that pins would make the difference — because a pin turned out to be exactly the difference!

West Valley's Gaylord Lane (Camden) registered a fall with 11 seconds remaining in the second round at 190 pounds to lift West Valley to a thrilling 22-21 GGC victory over the Jaguars on San Jose's home mat.

The win left the Vikings 5-1 in the conference and all but locked up their spot in second place. West Valley now must face only last place San Mateo in dual match action, the Vikes closing out the GGC year on Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at home against the Bulldogs.

WEST VALLEY won only four matches against San Jose, but Lane pinned to roll up six team points; Dan Browning (Prospect) won by forfeit at heavyweight for six points, Mike Fredenburg (Campbell) won by default at 142 pounds for six more and Rudy Ambriz claimed a 14-4 major decision win at 118 pounds for four team points.

Ambriz started the match with his 14-4 win at 118 pounds but San Jose came back to win three straight.

Mike Davis (Westmont) lost by injury default at 126 pounds when he sustained a knee injury in first round action. He trailed just 2-1 at the time.

Mike Dyer (Campbell) lost a very close 9-8 decision at 134 pounds and Rod Hartrum lost 9-5 at 142.

Fredenburg tightened the team score at 12-10 with his win at 150 pounds. Fredenburg was leading 10-1 when his Jag opponent was disqualified becuase of stalling tactics.

San Jose again came back with three straight wins, though, to take a 21-10 lead.

Steve Cunningham (Camden) fought San Jose's fine 158 pounder, Jesse Solorio, but dropped a 10-5 decision and Mark Lane (Camden) was upset 10-9 at 167.

Ted Corona moved up three divisions to wrestle at 177 pounds for the Vikings. Corona's job there was to stay off his back and he did his job well, losing just 7-5 to give up only three team points to San Jose. Had he given up any more team points at that weight, West Valley would not have been able to post a team victory.

BROWNING WAS to win a forfeit at heavyweight, so it all came down to the 190 pound bout with G. Lane taking the mat for the Vikes needing a pin.

And the big Viking came through with just what his team needed when he registered a fall at 4:49 of his bout to give West Valley the team win.

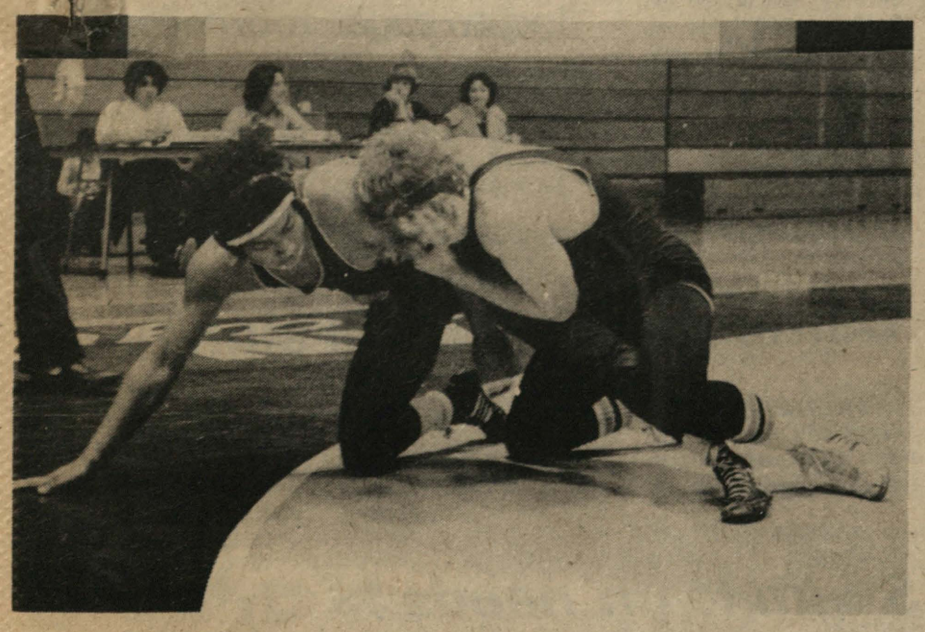
A few days later, the Vikings posted a team third at the Cabrillo team tournament in Aptos. Three individual champions led the Vikes to the team third.

Ambriz at 118, M. Lane at 167 and G. Lane at 177 each rolled to individual titles for West Valley. Hartrum at 142 and Cunningham at 158 added seconds for the Vikings.

The same day Fredenburg represented Northern California in the North-South All-Star dual match in Bakersfield.

Fredenburg posted an exciting 2-1 victory over Glen Oltmans of Cypress College to run his season record to 37-1. It was the third time this year Fredenburg has beaten Oltmans, whipping him in overtime in the finals of the Fresno tournament and in the semi-finals at the Cal Poly tourney.

Fredenburg's win at 142 pounds was just one of two for the North in the 25-8 loss to the South.



NORTH WINNER — West Valley College's Mike Fredenburg, a graduate of Campbell high, was one of only two North winners last week at the North South All Star meet. Fredenburg, shown here beating a San Jose City College opponent, was a 2-1 winner at 142 pounds.

'Pro' wrestling bad enough, now another cloud hits mats

on the hot corner

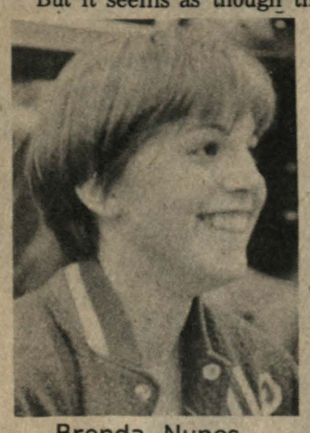
by dick sparrer

THE NOBLE sport of inter-scholastic wrestling has been fighting hard over the years to build up a reputation.

For years the wrestlers and their coaches have had to operate under a dark cloud — a cloud loosely referred to as professional wrestling.

But with national exposure on television through the Olympic Games and the NCAA championships, wrestling has reached a level of popularity as a spectator sport, followed closely on both the collegiate and high school levels.

But it seems as though the sport had another dark cloud fly into the picture last week and begin to hover over its existence — a girl has attempted to join a boy's wrestling team!



Brenda Nunes, Buc wrestler?

Brenda Nunes, a pleasant young junior at Campbell high school, turned out for her school's junior varsity wrestling team in early January when an Ohio court ruled that girls should be allowed to compete in contact sports with boys.

But Nunes never did get to wrestle a match for the Campbell jv's. On the night of her first bout, Leigh high school forfeited to her at 105 pounds. And two days later, when she was scheduled to wrestle again, the West Valley Athletic League Board of Managers ruled that she would not be allowed to compete.

EVEN THOUGH she never got to take her turn in the center of the Buccaneer's big blue mat, she left the city of Campbell and the entire Santa Clara County in an uproar over the issue.

The event raised everything from charges of denial of Brenda's constitutional rights to charges of a sex scandal in WVAL wrestling!

The response to the entire display has been anything but positive. Some agree with Nunes and her cause, but most disagree. And I certainly have to join the majority.

In talking with Brenda last Friday evening, I have to admit that this is no fly-by-night scheme — the girl seemed genuinely interested in the sport of wrestling. But all of the attention she received just swallowed her up!

But in spite of her sincere desire to compete, I don't believe she should be allowed to — at least not on a boy's team.

It's been said and repeated many times during this episode, there is a difference between boys and girls. And boys and girls in their formative years should not be subjected to such a contact sport.

Have things changed that much since I was in high school many years ago?

During those days, and it was only 10 years ago, we had rules to live by. There were chaperones at our dances who watched for cheek-to-cheekers and roving hands. There had to be daylight between two dancing partners or the plug would be pulled on the five piece band.

I REALIZE that times have changed, and I also realize that Brenda isn't interested in meeting a wrestler at midmat for a slow dance, but have we reached such a unisex level that we see no male-female barrier any longer?

That's not to say that there's anything sexual about the sport of wrestling. But it is a sex issue, and not just an issue of personal rights.

If Brenda had been allowed to wrestle last week, it would not have been just two athletes on the mat — it would have been a boy against a girl!

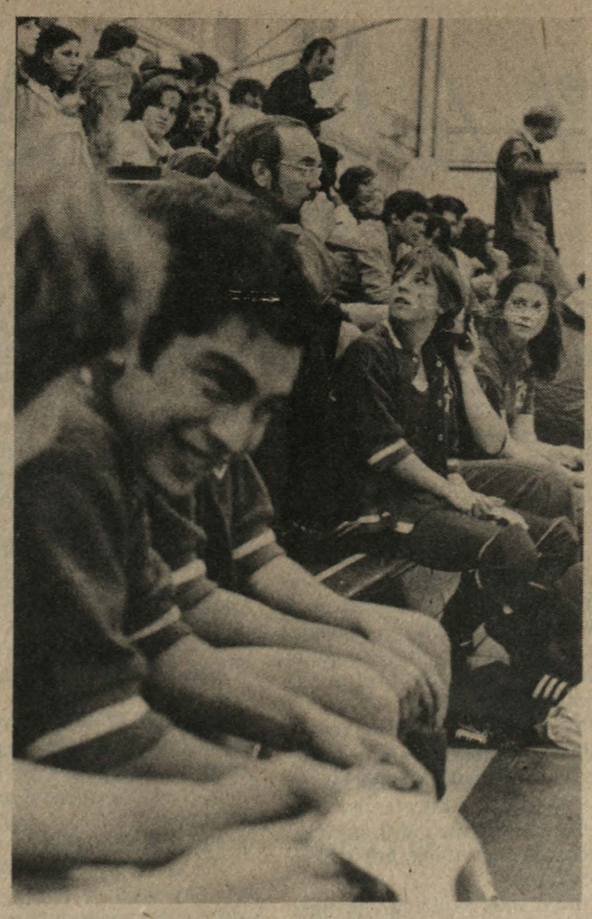
If, in fact, they were just two athletes, why wouldn't they follow the rulebook and weigh in shoulder-to-shoulder stripped to the skin. Provisions were made for Brenda, and that should not be necessary. But provisions were made for the obvious reason — Brenda is a girl.

It's too bad that the eipsode had to become a circus, though, for everyone involved, especially Brenda who was overwhelmed by the exposure.

"It's a shame that the only way our sport can get any publicity is for something like this to happen," said longtime area wrestling coach and official Lynn Dyche.

Well, it didn't just happen — Campbell high school asked for what it got in a phone campaign for publicity four days before the Campbell-Leigh match.

But despite the television cameras, the newspaper reporters, the photographers and the crowd of more than 600, Leigh coach Bill Dauphin was defiant and refused to subject his young wrestler to such a display — and I respect him for that.



CENTER OF STORM — Brenda Nunes was the center of a storm that swept through the WVAL last week when she tried to become the first girl to wrestle a boy in high school athletics. Nunes was later declared ineligible to wrestle by the WVAL Board of Managers, who disregarded a federal court ruling in Ohio to the contrary.

on the 'right' corner

By PAT SAFFORD

NOW THAT MOST of the furor has subsided over Campbell High School's short lived feminine addition to the wrestling team, a basic question remains.

o Should participation in certain school-sponsored activities be restricted on the basis of sex? From the majority opinion expressed this past week by callers by almost all coaches of boy sports, the answer is a resounding "Yes!" I don't agree.

The objections boil down to three basic arguments.

o It would be unfair to expect boys to compete against girls in contact sports because we place them in a "no win" situation. If they win, some say, the boys will feel like bullies. If they lose, they will be ashamed to hold up their heads in public. The argument fosters the long held opinion that women (and girls) are inferior creatures. Not just that boys and men are usually physically stronger but that, to be beaten by a girl, would create an unhealable dent in a boy's developing ego.

This "no win" situation is untenable for any competitor. But the situation exists because of a cultural heritage which has handed down this "second class" human status from generation to generation. That attitude is apparent even in this so-called enlightened age and nowhere more pronounced than in the world of sports where the highest insult a coach or fellow player can hurdle is to say, "You play like a girl."

It's true that most men are physically stronger than most women. But this wasn't the case of a 200 pound titan pitted against a 100 pound "frail." The wrestling match was two small competitors (in the 100 pound range) who would have been competing against each other in skill, strength and endurance.

While many have been worrying about all those boys who were being asked to wrestle a girl, how about a few feelings of compassion for the girl who attempted to do the unthinkable. She was left standing there in front of hundreds of people, with TC cameras grinding away recording her rejection.

GIRLS WOULD GET HURT IN CONTACT SPORTS. Anyone can get hurt in contact sports, or in tennis, gymnastics, woodshop or water skiing. The person engaged in a contact sport certainly runs the risk of injury and anyone who signs-up accepts that responsibility. The fact is that many boys are not strong enough or coordinated enough to be engaging in contact sports. But, in our society, where the football scholarship is looked on as the crowning glory to a high school education, many boys struggle to meet the expectations of their parents or coaches. And many fail.

This world is made up of many kinds of individuals. This includes athletes and non-athletes; both men and women. And, while it is important to be as healthy and strong as possible, some individuals by virtue of their star status. Others never will.

I believe that ability should be the criteria in competing in any field. Not sex, not race and not age. It's important that in school-sponsored activities particularly, all those competing meet minimum standards of proficiency. That they be physically healthy and that coaches be responsible for instilling the basic skills (and safeguards) needed to engage in that particular sport. Beyond that students, all students, should be allowed to go as far as their ability will take them.

o If you open up boy's sports to girls, you'll have to open girl's sports to boys. The argument that follows is that, if boys get on the girl's volleyball team, they'll ruin it. The boys would be so much better that girls wouldn't get to play. Perhaps. But maybe these other sports programs would be upgraded. And perhaps schools might have to set up an A through D league, for instance, to accommodate all the players. Or perhaps even the caliber of players, both male and female, would be upgraded.

Culturally, others argue, the girls would have an advantage in contact sports because boys have been taught to respect and protect girls. And perhaps they have to womankind in general (despite contrary evidence in many movies and TV programs). But I'll bet many a girl wishes her brother would follow that cultural code on the home front.

If attitude gives girls an advantage, maybe that's not so bad. The first girls to compete in other exclusively male domains have had plenty of obstacles thrown in their paths. A little "advantage", if there is any, in this case might help balance the scale for the first to compete so their task is the equivalent of scaling Mt. Whitney, instead of Mt. Everest.

When you strip away the cultural question, the ego question and emotional responses ("But would you want YOUR daughter to be a wrestler?"(what you're left with is. . .

Should any qualified person be allowed to compete in this world? To take the risk of defeat (or even injury), to accept the responsibility of meeting standards and disciplines in that field, to develop their potential as far as their ability will take them and to, hopefully, win the prize, capture the title or reach their goal?

I feel they should.

If Brenda were soundly defeated during her first league matches, she might have given up the sport and, instead, used her energy to cheer others on or transfer to a "girls sport."

If Brenda had won she might have forced many people to reexamine their preconceived notions about what girls can and cannot do.

But now, we'll never know.

Undroughting poses problems

Although generally welcomed, this winter's abundant rainfall to date is not seen as an unmitigated boon by all.

In a brisk stroll around town, our Prying Reporter has discovered a number of local citizens who are downright dismayed by what appears to be the beginning of the end of the drought.

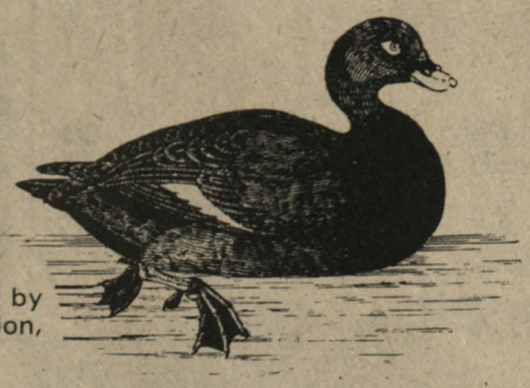
Herewith is a random sampling of complaints by a few of those queried.

Bewildered conservationist cannot figure out where in his waterlogged garden to dump the pails of water collected from shower, tub and sink. sink.

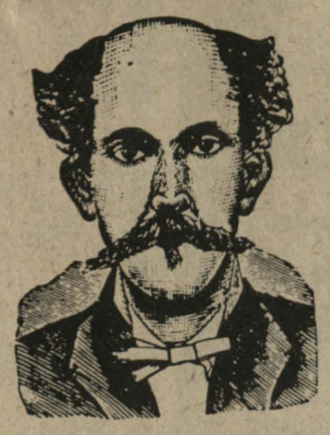
Harried housepersion out of training on coping with the phenomenon of mud tracked into the house on clean carpets and floors.

Homeowner depressed to learn that his roof has hitherto unsuspected sieve-like qualities.

Disgruntled publicist who has forged a successful career by writing water conservation tips.



Feathered friend bored to distraction by hearing the oft-repeated expression, "Nice weather for ducks."



Disappointed well-digger facing a drastic drop in his booming business.
